Nats Blow 4-Run Lead, Beaten by Indians, 5-4

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Cleveland, May 24.—Gene Bearden, the ne'er-do-well of the Cleveland pitching staff, staged a sudden form reversal tonight and permitted his playmates to wrest a 5-4 victory from the Nats.

It was a sad evening for the Washington club which belted Early Wynn from the box to take a 4-0 lead in the second inning, only to run into stone-wall resistance from Beardon.

The tall left hander, who had been tolerated by Manager Boudreau for only five innings all season, threw seven scoreless innings at the unhappy Nats.

Haynes Fritters Away Lead

Unhappiest of the Nats was Joe Haynes, who inherited a 4-1 lead from Steve Nagy in the fourth inning and pitched it away by the sixth.

Dale Mitchell and Bob Kennedy saluted Haynes with one out in that sixth with consecutive doubles to left field that tied the score and set Hank Greenberg's jeep transportation in motion from the Nats' bullpen.

Mickey Harris was the passenger, and he had no immediate success. Mickey Vernon, the former Nat, greeted him with a single to right and Kennedy cautiously held up at third with the winning run. Harris walked Doby, but the Indians got Kennedy home when Al Rosen grounded to Dente, whose momentary slip prevented what might have been a run-killing double play.

Bearden Saves Self

Bearden clinched his victory with a supersensational fielding play in the ninth, when the Nats were threatening to pull the game out. Eddie Yost led off with a walk, and Pinch Hitter Bob Ortiz moved him to second with a single to left.

Ed Stewart laid down the conventional bunt, and it looked like a beaut until Bearden suddenly fished the ball up near the third base line with one hand, and got off a desperate throw to Rosen at third base, while off balance.

Bearden landed on his face, a dozen feet in foul territory, but Yost was forced at third. Eddie Robinson then obliged the Indians by banging a double play grounder at Joe Gordon to send the local athletes at their 13,082 fans home quite delighted.

Back in the second inning, the Nats threatened to win the ball game in a breeze. They whacked Early Wynn for four hits—singles by Mele, Dente, Grasso and Coan, which with Yost's walk accounted for three runs. The jeep brought

150 Men Shove 10,000-Ton Ship To Rescue Child

New York, May 24 (AP).—One hundred and fifty longshoremen shoved against a 10,000-ton steamship to push it from a wharf and permit the rescue of a child caught between the pier and ship today.

Two of their mates formed a human chain, lowering Joseph Zapulla, face down, to the girl. He pulled her up. Diana was unhurt.

Gen. Clay and Others Praise Post Proposal

Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States Army (retired), former military governor of Germany, yesterday indorsed the proposal of The Washington Post for a "Commission on National Security."

In an editorial, "The Road Back to America," The Post suggested on Monday that such a commission might survey major aspects of national security—the internal menace of the fifth column, civilian defense, development of new weapons, the size and use of military expenditures, and economic restoration of our friends and allies.

The commission, to be made up of members representative of both great political parties, would not attempt to make decisions which inevitably are the responsibility of the President and of Congress. Neither would it attempt to take over the work of the FBI or the Chiefs of Staff or other agencies.

Gen. Lucius Clay

"But what it can do," said the editorial, "is to take a fresh look at our situation and give the American people a trustworthy, 'unpartisan' statement of the salient facts affecting our security."

General Clay in his telegram to The Post said:

"Your editorial, 'The Road Back to America,' is a constructive approach to the correction of conditions which tend to destroy the effectiveness of our international position. I hope your commission idea will be received seriously. It is a splendid thought."

Something like two score of leaders in political, military, professional and business life have now lined up behind The Post's proposal. Some have indorsed it outright, some with reservations. In several instances, variations of the proposal have been put forward.

Other comment received yesterday follows:

Allen W. Dulles of New York, a high-ranking officer in the United States Office of Strategic Services in World War II, and brother of John Foster Dulles,—"I thoroughly agree that we should have a commission on national security. In fact . . . over a year ago . . . I suggested that we should have in the United States something comparable to the Canadian Royal Commission which did such an outstanding job in investigating the Soviet spy ring in Canada, and I added that 'the success of the commission's work points to the desirability of having available here in the United States a Federal agency which we might for convenience call "'Commission on Internal Security'."

Allen W. Dulles

"'Such a commission could investigate the practices and policies of Soviet communism stemming from abroad but operating here and fanning out in various channels to threaten our democratic institutions. In fact, it could show how they use and abuse these very institutions of liberty to destroy liberty.'

"As regards the precise form of your suggestion, I feel that you have so expanded the proposed scope of the work of the commission that its effectiveness might be impaired.

"Personally I think the commission would have plenty to do if it investigated the major aspects of national security and the internal menace of fifth columns and subversive penetration without going into the whole range of civilian defense, new weapons and economic aid to our allies. The latter are all vitally important questions, but each is a major study in itself.

"While I join with you in deeply deprecating and repudiating the tactics which have been followed in blackening reputations without evidence, I am sure you will appreciate that many people who feel as I do in this respect nevertheless have an uneasy feeling that subversive influences may have been a contributory cause of some of the failures of Far Eastern policy and that incidents such as the Amerasia case deserve the fullest investigation by a competent and impartial commission such as you suggest.

"One final word. Any such commission as proposed should not interfere in any way with the FBI and should not have overlapping functions with the latter as I feel strongly that the FBI merits our gratitude and deserves our support."

William L. Batt 2d, president, SKF Industries, who was at one time vice chairman of the War Production Board,—"The Post has again made a large contribution to American sanity through its editorial. . . . Day by day we have been weakening our world leadership and endangering the peace. Anything that will stop this fantastic process of self destruction is worth trying and your proposal for what the British would call a royal high commission of review should be warmly encouraged."

William L. Batt

Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the board, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad, who was Foreign Economic administrator in World War II,—"I read with great interest your editorial on setting up a nonpartisan committee to review some problems in government. I want to compliment you on this suggestion and think it is very constructive and would be of great benefit to our country with the many problems it faces in the foreign field."

Erwin N. Griswold, dean of the Law School of Harvard University,—"I have just read The Post's remarkable editorial, as reprinted in today's Wall Street Journal.

"This is a great public service, and a clear example of the best traditions of a free press. We have long needed something like this from a voice articulate enough to state it effectively, and

Federal Morals Investigation Is Approved by Senate Group

A $25,000 fund to investigate homosexuals and other perverts in Government service was recommended unanimously by the Senate Expenditures Committee yesterday.

The Expenditures Committee, headed by Senator John McClellan (D., Ark.), voted to undertake the investigation recommended by the District appropriations subcommittee last week.

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), who has charged that both Communists and perverts are employed in the State Department, attended the committee session, but left before the vote was taken. He already has disqualified himself as a member of the investigating team because the inquiry overlaps his charges.

The action of the 10-member District group had been unanimous, and that of the Expenditures Committee also was made unanimous by the vote of the 10 members present.

Senator Kenneth Wherry (R., Nebr.) who initiated the demand for the investigation, and Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.), chairman of the District funds group, both testified on the proposed investigation in closed-door meeting of the expenditures group.

Wherry said he gave the Expenditures Committee some "new leads" to work on, but would not

Congressmen Predict More Spy Arrests

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Members of Congress predicted arrests of other contacts of Dr. Klaus Fuchs would follow that of Harry Gold, Philadelphia biochemist seized by the FBI Tuesday.

Although indications were that Gold played a lone hand in relaying information to Russia for the British atomic scientist, these members of Congress expressed the belief other contacts would be revealed by Fuchs. Two FBI agents are now questioning the German-born scientist who recently was sentenced to 14 years in England for stealing atomic secrets for Russia while a member of the wartime British atomic mission to this country.

Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), a member of the Joint Atomic Energy Committee, definitely predicted other arrests. Representative James E. Van Zandt (R., Pa.), another Atomic Energy Committee member, said:

"We know definitely that there are others involved. It's just a question of the FBI getting them. They've been working on this for months."

FBI Keeps Silent

The FBI yesterday maintained its traditional silence on developments in the case after its dramatic announcement Tuesday night that the 39-year-old Gold had been arrested in Philadelphia. Gold was immediately arraigned and held in $100,000 bond.

These further developments in the case appeared yesterday:

1. According to fully authenticated reports, Fuchs did not supply the FBI with Gold's name. Rather was he apprehended after several months of painstaking work which resulted in eliminating at least 1200 suspects before suspicion definitely pointed to him.

2. The uncanny secrecy under which he managed to cover his connections with Fuchs and with Soviet officials was indicated by the files of the House Un-American Activities Committee. Although those files contain an estimated one million or more names of Communists, former Communists, suspected Communists and members of Communist-front organizations, Gold was not among them under either his present name or the original family name, Golodnitszky.

Bentley Reports Denied

3. Reports that Miss Elizabeth T. Bentley, confessed former Soviet courier, had given Gold's name to a New York grand jury were denied by Irving Saypol, United States district attorney in New York City. Saypol, who handled the recent series of Communist cases in New York, told The Washington Post he "knows nothing" of Miss Bentley's reported testimony.

It was learned yesterday that Gold was arrested in Philadelphia by five FBI agents, including Arthur Cornelius, jr., head of the FBI Philadelphia office, and United States Deputy Marshal John Leahy. He was taken before United States District Judge James P. McGranery on a fugitive warrant from New York. Judge McGranery ordered him held in $100,000 bail at the request, he said, of Cornelius.

A further hearing was set for June 12, at which time, said McGranery, "Cornelius said the FBI

Wallgren, Mead Head New Boards

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday elevated two old friends, Mon C. Wallgren and James M. Mead, to key Federal jobs as he moved swiftly to reorganize the executive branch of the Government.

He also named Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, United States Army (retired), to a newly created post, Undersecretary of Commerce for Transportation. General Fleming has been chairman of the Maritime Commission, which is now absorbed by the Department of Commerce. He will receive $17,500 a year.

Mr. Truman was ready with a heavy batch of appointments once Congress allowed 16 of 21 Government reorganization plans to become law at midnight Tuesday. He announced seven of them yesterday. Only that of General Fleming requires Senate confirmation.

Wallgren, already a member of the Federal Power Commission, was made chairman of that body, at the same salary of $15,000 a year. He succeeds Nelson Lee Smith, who continues as a member of the FPC.

Mason Stays on FTC

Mead, a member of the Federal Trade Commission, also was elevated to chairman. His salary will remain at $15,000. He replaces Lowell Mason, a Republican who has been acting as chairman. Mason will continue as a member of the FTC.

Both Wallgren and Mead were cronies of the President when he was a Senator from Missouri. Wallgren left the Senate to become governor of the State of Washington, and became jobless when he was defeated for reelection in 1948. Mead resigned from the Senate to make an unsuccessful race for governor of New York in 1946.

President Truman named Wallgren to the Federal Power Commission after the Senate turned him down for chairman of the National Security Resources Board.

Among other appointments announced at the White House yesterday was that of Harry A. McDonald to be chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, a post he already held.

Uses New Authority

Mr. Truman, in naming Wallgren, Mead and McDonald to chairmanships, was taking advantage of new authority given him in the reorganization plans.

Heretofore the three commissions have chosen their own chairmen, usually following a rotation system, but the chairmen had no greater authority than the other members. Under reorganization, the President designates the chairman, and that official then becomes the executive head of the agency, with indidvual authority over all personnel and administrative problems.

The White House announced these 90-day appointments:

John T. Koehler, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, to be an acting member and acting chairman of the Federal Maritime Board.

South Trimble, jr., now chairman of the advisory board of the Inland Waterways Corp., a Government agency administered by the Department of Commerce, to be an active member of the Federal Maritime Board.

Rear Adm. Paul L. Mather, United States Navy (retired),

Bevin Tells Commons

Britain to Back Chinese Reds In U. N. If Russia Ends 'Strike'

London, May 24 (NYHT)—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin indicated today that Britain would like to see Communist China admitted to the United Nations, but not because of Russian duress. If Russia would return to the world forum, he suggested, Britain would be willing to negotiate a transfer of Chinese representation.

In a Commons debate, Bevin thus gave his answer to the proposal of Trygve Lie, U. N. Secretary General, for the admission of Communist China as a prelude to a high-level Security Council meeting to resolve the East-West conflict.

In effect, Bevin told Russia that if it would call off its "strike" against the U. N., Britain would endeavor to heal the Security Council paralysis.

[Britain abstained from voting on January 13 when the Security Council refused to expel the Chinese Nationalist delegate.

[However, Britain has recognized the Chinese Communists and has favored seating their delegates in place of the Nationalists. It has been no secret that the British lobbied, but failed, at Lake Success to round up the necessary majority of seven in the Security Council.

[The United States has said it would continue to vote against unseating the Nationalists, but would not use its veto to prevent a majority of the Council from doing so.

[Secretary Acheson reaffirmed this position at the recent foreign ministers' meetings in London. The foreign ministers decided that each of the three major Western Allies would go its own way on this issue.

[It was understood at the London meetings that the British would come out openly for seating the Chinese Communists, but that the Americans and French would not follow suit—Editor's note.]

"It is better that the new China should be in the U.N.", Bevin declared in Commons today. Lie, who departed tonight for the United States by air, appeared to be convinced of the possibility of a break in the East-West "log jam."

"At this time I can only say that I am not dissatisfied with my talks in the three European capitals," Lie said.

"No doors have been closed. I return to the headquarters of the United Nations with the belief that the possibility of constructive negotiation exists."

Lie said he would wait in New York until President Truman and Secretary Acheson were ready to

* * * * * * *

Danny Kaye, one of the most explosive entertainers in show business, yesterday accepted an invitation to play in The Washington Post's National Celebrities Golf Tournament June 3-4 at Army-Navy Country Club and also appear on the Bob Hope Celebrities Show at the Armory, June 3.

"It's a real honor," he wired from New York, "I've always wanted to participate in an event of this nature, especially in Washington. It gives you a chance to be with the people."

With the versatile, Brooklyn-born comedian-vocalist on the same bill with the irrepressible Hope, the celebrities show now boasts two of the few Americans ever to make command performances before the King and Queen of England.

Tickets for the two-day Celebrities Golf Tournament and the Hope Celebrities Show, which will include Arthur Godfrey, Ben Hogan, Babe Didrikson and many others, are on sale at Champion Sports, 816 13th st. nw.; Fairway Sport Shop, 1328 G st. nw.; Sports Center, 8th and D sts. nw., and the lobby of The Washington Post.

Revival of Freedom Fair Plans Demanded at Citizens' Rally

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

Loaded with pep and indignation, a cross-section of Washington citizens last night whooped it up for the fading Freedom Fair.

Reportedly representing 68 organizations and 293,000 citizens, the group of 129 persons made the District Building board room resound with protests against action of the Sesquicentennial Commission's executive committee in recommending abandonment of the fair.

Emphatically, they sought to prove that President Truman was "misinformed" when he said last week that the people of Washington don't seem to want a Freedom Fair.

The meeting, sponsored by the Federation of Businessmen's Associations, demanded a hearing before the full Sesquicentennial Commission before the body acts June 1 on its executive committee's recommendation to forget about the exposition.

In a ringing resolution, unanimously adopted, the gathering urged the President "to take such steps as may be necessary to place on the commission men who are enthusiastic for Freedom Fair, removing from the commission, if necessary, all those who have obstructed plans for a Freedom Fair."

It also asked the President and the commission to "order full speed ahead" on fair plans. The resolution was submitted by John H. Connaughton, former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations.

All persons attending the meeting were appointed members of a citizens committee for the fair by J. A. Kamerow, chairman of a tem-

Ingrid, Rossellini Wed in Mexican Proxy Ceremony

(From Wire Dispatches)

Rome, May 24.—Movie Director Roberto Rossellini said tonight that he and Ingrid Bergman, who bore a son by him on February 2, were married by proxy in Juarez, Mexico, today.

(In Hollywood, a spokesman for Dr. Peter Lindstrom said the proxy marriage would make no difference in his plans to divorce the film star in the California courts. His attorney, Isaac Pacht, said the marriage "has the same status as her recent Mexican divorce—none whatever.")

Truman Gets Bill Providing Payday Funds

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Congress yesterday completed and sent to the White House an emergency bill to avert payless paydays for thousands of District and Federal employes.

When signed by the President, the measure will make funds available to cover Government paydays remaining between now and the June 30 end of the fiscal year.

Final form of the pay legislation was worked out in an afternoon conference by members of the Senate and House appropriations committees.

House Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) cleared the compromise measure through the House shortly after 3 p. m.

Within an hour, the Senate approved the measure at the request of Senate Appropriations Chairman Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.).

Officials said the measure passed in time to erase the threat of payless paydays for Federal employes wtihout any exceptions now known.

The Federal agencies had deferred other payments where necessary to scrape together funds for this month's paydays.

Three Judges and 11 other employes of the Municipal Court of Appeals missed this week's payday, District officials reported, but thousands of other municipal workers are being paid.

The officials said they expect other city pay days—teachers on June 2, and other municipal workers around June 6—to be met on time. They said special efforts will be made to see that no more pay days are missed in this fiscal year. They said it may take 10 days to two weeks to make the Municipal Appeals Court salary payments.

28 Killed as Plane Hits Volcano

Cali, Colombia, May 24 (U.P.).—Twenty-eight persons were killed today when a Douglas transport plane crashed into the Galeras volcano in southern Colombia and burned.

The only known survivor was a young girl who was said to have suffered serious injuries.

Slum Redevelopment Project Abandoned at Marshall Hts.

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

District Commissioners yesterday officially abandoned Marshall Heights as a slum redevelopment project and ordered the "freeze" on new building ended today.

Their action, taken after a brief but fiery public hearing, ended a one-year stalemate and means:

1. The District's four-year-old Redevelopment Land Agency has lost its first and only project, but has had the way cleared for action on another.

2. Property owners in Marshall Heights may now build new homes or remodel existing structures. They have been prevented from doing either since May 17, 1949, when the Commissioners approved the Marshall Heights project and froze all construction there.

District Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young warned, however, that yesterday's action will not lead to an immediate solution of the Marshall Heights problem.

Many of the homes in this 180-acre tract in southeast Washington have no water or sewer connections. Most streets are either not paved or are in poor condition. Most residents there have from the first asked that the District lift the freeze, put in utilities and let

Youths of 18 To Register; Inductions Would Wait

National Emergency Ruling by Congress Required to Call Men Into Service

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The House yesterday voted to keep the Nation's draft machinery operating for another two years but with actual inductions barred until a national emergency.

By a standing vote of 216 to 11, it approved legislation continuing the Selective Service Act of 1948 on the books until June 24, 1952. Young men of 18 would have to continue to register and would be classified by their draft boards.

Congress, however, would have to pass a concurrent resolution declaring a national emergency before anyone could be called to the colors.

On motion of Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee, the title of the measure was amended to call it the "Manpower Registration Act" instead of the Selective Service Law, to indicate the change in its character.

Mobilization Act Asked

Vinson also called for adoption of a general mobilization act, covering capital and labor as well as the armed forces. He said he hoped Chairman W. Stuart Symington of the National Security Resources Board would prepare such a measure between now and next January.

"It should be passed on a stand-by basis where it will be on the shelf when an emergency arises," he added.

A new provision of the extension act would empower the President to order all members or units of the National Guard and Reserves, as well as retired personnel, into active service, upon declaration of a national emergency by Congress. They could be required in such case to serve 21 months—the period of draft service.

Measure Goes to Senate

The bill, which now goes to the Senate, also would permit the President to invoke the present provisions of the Selective Service Act authorizing the drafting of industry only after a congressional declaration of an emergency.

President Truman and top defense chiefs asked Congress last January to pass legislation continuing the full powers of the Selective Service Act for another three years.

The House Armed Services Committee, however, last month amended the extension bill after hearing testimony that no inductions probably would be needed to keep the ranks of the peacetime forces filled and that Pentagon chiefs mainly were concerned about being able to mobilize in an emergency. They said if Selective Service boards were disbanded, it would delay draft calls three months in time of trouble.

Administration chiefs indicated a willingness to accept a standby

Big 3 to Announce Arms Agreement For Middle East

By The Associated Press

President Truman and officials of Britain and France are planning to announce jointly today an agreement to ship limited quantities of arms to Middle Eastern countries for defensive purposes.

Officials said last night that the three powers have decided on this common policy as one means of supporting their over-all strategy in the cold war with Russia.

The President was understood to consider the agreement of major significance, inasmuch as there has been some friction between the Western powers on Middle Eastern questions.

The policy presumably would apply to both Arab countries and Israel. Israel has requested heavy military equipment from the United States but the State Department has declined to ship any on the grounds that such supplies are more urgently needed in Western Europe for Atlantic Pact countries.

Gain of Half Million Jobs in U. S. Seen

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday that things are looking up on the job front.

Latest check on jobs in the commercial-industrial fields shows that between March 15 and April 15 more than half a million workers were added to the Nation's payrolls.

What's more, there was also a sharp increase in the length of the work week in the manufacturing industries, indicating that many employes were taking home larger pay envelopes because of overtime.

The happy figures continued what the Bureau of Labor Statistics refers to as an "undertone of strength," displayed during the past several months. Not counting the return to work of strikers, more than 800,000 workers have obtained new jobs in the past two months.

The latest figures show that 42.8 million persons were at work in April in the industrial-commercial fields of employment, a level closely approximating April of last year.

Employment rose by 117,000 in the durable goods group of manufacturing, more than offsetting a seasonal decline in soft goods, chiefly in apparel and shoes. Women's outwear was particularly hard hit by the seasonal slump, and employment fell to its lowest April level in the last three years. Even so, the over-all soft-goods job level is about that of the same period last year.

The expansion of jobs in the durable goods industries showed up in steel plants and foundries working on backlogs of orders accumulated during the recent coal stoppage. For the fourth consecutive month increased personnel rolls were reported by refrigerator and television companies. Auto industry employment was also on the upgrade.

The residential building boom pushed construction industry employment to an all-time April high, exceeding the peak established during the 1942 war construction program.

Other Increases

The spring season brought a boost in employment in trade and in railroad maintenance. There was also a sharp increase in hiring by the Government for the temporary census-taking jobs.

For the second month, unemployment dropped substantially, declining to 3.5 million in April from 4.1 million in March, according to the Census Bureau. This figure, the lowest since last fall, is still half a million above the April 1949 unemployment figure.

3 West Virginians Urge Oil Import Curb

Three West Virginians yesterday joined in a plea to Congress to halt or limit importation of cheap oil which they said was creating a depression in their mining State.

Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.) charged that the importation of the cheap residual oil, chiefly from Venezuela and the Near East, was a "plain dumping operation." He declared that the proposed tax of $1.05 a barrel on the imported oil would not hurt the President's move to help foreign countries earn American dollars because the imported oil was owned by seven American companies.

Kilgore warned that not only coal mines, but domestic refineries as well, were being forced to shut down because of the flood of imported oil, produced by low-paid labor, transported on foreign ships paying their crews sub-standard wages.

He urged adoption of a national fuel policy to be sure that all domestic fuels are available in time of an emergency. Otherwise, he said, the closed down mines and refineries might be unusable for many months, should they be needed in a hurry.

R. M. Davis, a West Virginia coal executive, also testifying before a Senate Labor subcommittee, said that coal production in this country might be cut in half by unrestricted imports of cheap oil, resulting in the loss of 200,000 jobs by miners.

G. F. Parrish, an official of the West Virginia Railroad Association, said that in the past year the cheap oil, used chiefly for power plants, is replacing coal in the New York-Philadelphia-New England region. This region, he said is thus jeopardizing its power in case of war, because the tankers delivering the oil would be the first targets of any enemy in a war.

In New York, Eugene Holman, president of Standard Oil of New Jersey, maintained that oil imports have played only a minor part in coal's loss of market in recent year. He said that coal's loss of markets has been to diesel fuel and home heating fuel, little of which is imported.

New Operation Pulls Youth From Brink of Bleeding Death

The Washington Post
Robert Simpson recovering after new, extremely delicate surgery

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A Gonzaga College high school senior who faced a bleeding death is recovering today, with thanks for a new surgery recently introduced to this city.

The patient, Robert Simpson, 19, of 1422 Irving st. nw., is recuperating at Emergency Hospital where he was rushed early this month after three blood-vomiting spells nearly killed him.

He suffered an extremely rare condition in which enlarged bloodways near the stomach break under duties nature never intended them to bear.

Besides blood-vessel surgery to correct the condition, another life-saving factor, his doctors said, was 17 pints of blood from the District Red Cross Blood Bank to carry him through the major operation.

Young Simpson's operation was a "porto-caval anastomosis," bloodway rerouting perfected in New York about five years ago. Since then, it has been tried successfully in Boston and Baltimore—now in this city.

It was devised to correct a condition which follows a blood block, occurring in infancy, between the liver and the spleen, a blood-processing organ near the heart end of the stomach. Because of the block, substitute routes are formed by enlargement of nearby blood vessels, normally almost invisible.

This stretching permits life to continue but brings the ever-increasing danger of breakdown of the vessels, and then death-dealing internal hemorrhages.

Twelve years ago, Young Simpson's spleen was removed. The spleen is not essential to life and in any event it had been rendered useless by the blood block.

His mother and father, a retired bridge tender, live in Beaufort, N. C., but Robert stayed here with his brothers and sisters, to be near expert medical care on the inevitable day when hemorrhages started.

That day came, his sister said, on May 3. He suffered three violent spells before doctors could move him to the hospital. In the hospital, balloons were threaded down his throat and inflated to stem the bleeding while life was sustained by the Red Cross blood. This was done thrice, 48 hours at a time.

But natural healing of the ruptured blood vessels did not occur. When the balloons were removed, the hemorrhages recurred.

A Children's Hospital surgeon had recently operated successfully on an Oakton, Va., boy with the same affliction. It was decided to try the formidable procedure in Simpson's case. Basically, it consisted of by-passing the affected network of veins by splicing other major bloodways, a technique similar to that in the famous Blalock-Taussig heart operation for "blue babies."

Young Simpson's operation was performed last Friday. Last night, his nurses said he was "coming along fine." He still hopes to get up for his graduation from Gonzaga on June 12.

Ballot Theft 'Holiday' Urged

Representative Woodruff (R., Mich.) told the House yesterday that May 28 should be made a national holiday to "commemorate the fact that the Truman Administration and especially the Justice Department will be able to relax completely for the first time in three years."

On that day, he said, criminals who stole Missouri primary ballots in Kansas City three years ago will begin enjoying "complete immunity for the rest of their lives."

The ballots were involved in charge of voting frauds in the 1946 primary in which President Truman went after the scalp of Roger Slaughter, the Democrat who then represented the district in which Mr. Truman lives. Slaughter was defeated in the primary.

The three-year statute of limitations, within which prosecutions could be started for vote frauds, runs out next Sunday, May 28.

Woodruff said Sunday will be greeted with "a sigh of relief" by the administration.

Representatives Macy and Keating, New York Republicans, criticized the Justice Department for failure to solve the ballot thefts.

Macy declared May 28 should become "a day of national mourning" and "a monument to the morality that has been lost from our Federal Government."

"Is that the kind of a crime that cannot be solved?" he asked. "Not at all. The only other answer is somebody did not want to solve it."

"The stolen ballots would have sent 71 vote crooks, mostly members of the Pendergast machine, to prison. President Truman boasts he is still a dues-paying member of that machine."

He said May 28 will be "a day of shame for every citizen. He has been betrayed by his own Government."

Macy said the ballots were stolen from the same building where deputy sheriffs are always on duty, across the street from the Police Department and five blocks from where the President was sleeping. Mr. Truman was visiting in Kansas City at the time.

Keating declared that "once again the whitewash is being applied, and its going on so thick that it smells from coast to coast."

He said if he were looking for the right place to go into business as a young man he would set up a "whitewash store in Kansas City" and "I could feel absolutely certain of doing a rushing business as long as the Truman Administration remained in power."

AFL Miners Told to Stop Intimidation

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday ruled, in effect, that there are limits to showing a dislike for John L. Lewis.

The board ordered the AFL Progressive Mine Workers Union, a rival of Lewis' United Mine Workers, to cease its threats of physical injury to Illinois miners who want to quit the PMW for the UMW.

Such threats—including specific mention of guns, knives, and blackjacks—are violations of the Taft-Hartley Management-Labor Relations Act, the board said.

The case involved two miners of the Tilden, Ill., mine of the Randolph Corp., whose employes are represented by the Progressive Miners. The two miners lost their jobs in the spring of 1948 after paying a visit to UMW officials.

The board found that the company was liable for the "constructive discharge" of the employes, and ordered company and union to reimburse the two miners for wages lost as a result of the discrimination.

Group Favors Settlement of Tax Defaults

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A virtual amnesty to income tax defaulters who make a "full and complete" disclosure of the amount of their tax underpayments and agree to pay up yesterday was voted by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The tax bill amendment, designed to encourage more voluntary disclosures, would subject such taxpayers to civil penalties (50 percent of the total tax plus 6 percent of the unpaid portion), but would amount to a guarantee against criminal prosecution.

Representative Aime J. Forand (D., R. I.), author of the amendment, estimated it would net the Treasury "many millions" in additional revenue from defaulters who fear criminal action if they step forward.

The amendment was adopted by a voice vote as the committee, still 648 million dollars shy of enough revenue to balance their excise tax cuts, prepared to consider the ticklish problem of taxing Co-ops today.

Members said privately the only outside chance of offsetting tax loss with tax gains lies in a forthcoming motion to increase the corporate income tax rate a flat 2 percent. That would yield an additional 500 million dollars and approximately balance the losses.

The Forand amendment, inviting tax dodgers to come in and pay up, would give statutory force for the first time to an Internal Revenue Bureau practice of long standing.

In most delinquent cases the bureau follows a policy of waiving criminal prosecution if a taxpayer voluntarily discloses the amount of his underpayment.

But the present bureau practice is in no sense a guarantee against criminal prosecution, particularly if the bureau has launched a prosecution in advance of the disclosure.

In addition, many tax defaulters are unaware of the policy and affirmative action by Congress would encourage them to come in, committee spokesmen said.

If they fail to, and are prosecuted, they are liable to criminal penalties of up to five years and $10,000, in addition to civil penalties.

The Forand amendment simply authorizes the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to issue rules and regulations "which shall set forth the time within which such disclosures may be made and the procedures which must be followed in making such disclosures."

Senate Votes Today On Foreign Aid Issue

After another day of apparent delaying tactics by a few Republicans, the Senate agreed late yesterday to vote at 4:30 this afternoon on the Senate-House conference report on the foreign aid bill.

The House has approved the conference report, but Senate action was blocked on Tuesday by Republican objections over the Point Four program for undeveloped areas.

Yesterday Senator William E. Jenner (R., Ind.) called Point Four a Communist program hatched by Earl Browder, the former Communist leader here. He said it was "part of the Communist plan to force the Western world to destroy itself and to force America herself into bankruptcy."

Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.) held the floor for 3½ hours, with the help of Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.), until all hope of a vote yesterday had vanished. Malone argued that Point Four was only an entering wedge for vast new American commitments and expenditures around the world.

But the Republican floor leader, Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) did not object when Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Foreign Relations Committee proposed a time limit on further debate. The Senate will meet at 11 this morning, thus leaving more than four hours for both sides to state their case.

A close vote is likely, but the prospect last night was that the conference report would win, since the Republicans themselves are split on the Point Four issue.

Says Mrs. Roosevelt

Red Attitude Should Curb Complacency

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said here last night that she "misses" the frequent Russian attacks against the United States in the United Nations, because they were always "a real challenge."

Before the USSR's boycott of U. N. sessions, the American delegate said she found its attacks "very useful" because they "never allow you to become complacent" about democracy.

The late President's wife spoke before a meeting of the Friends Committee on National Legislation, attended by about 200 representatives of civic, religious, welfare, labor, veterans and political groups at Pierce Hall, 16th and Harvard sts. nw.

She was pleased to hear that Attorney General J. Howard McGrath reported that the FBI knows of no Communists in the Government, Mrs. Roosevelt said.

"I'm hoping it will allow a little freer access to our country by the peoples of others—even those behind the Iron Curtain," she said, "because there is nothing like demonstration to show how democracy works."

Our democracy isn't "perfect," Mrs. Roosevelt said, "but that's the risk we have to run in showing others we are at work improving it."

She urged her listeners as "members of strong non-governmental organizations" to use their political strength in "educating the people" on matters of freedom and international goodwill.

"The real reason we cannot control atomic energy," she said, "is because we're so suspicious of each other."

Democracy takes "many forms," and there are "many people striving for freedom in a different way from ours," she declared.

But it is the "great responsibility" of the organizations represented at the meeting to foster a "crusading spirit for the ideals of democracy equal to the feelings of young Communists, whose ideas have become a religion with them," Mrs. Roosevelt concluded.

Reds Shift War Plants To Safety

London, May 23 (U.P.).—Russia has shifted four-fifths of her industrial production to remote safety areas far in the interior, it was indicated today.

The conclusion is based on information in official Russian publications and on the Moscow Radio, and from information compiled by the United Nations.

Only one-fifth of Russia's total industrial output was estimated to remain in the European regions of the Soviet Union—mainly in the industrial Donets Basin of the Ukraine and Leningrad areas. Before the war, about 40 percent of Russia's output came from the west.

The shift has been a declared policy of the current five-year plan, but late developments indicate it has been applied with particular speed.

Furthermore, production in the inner industrial areas has risen to 80 percent above the prewar level, while in the war-stricken areas of European Russia, production has just reached the prewar rate.

Russia plans to get 40 percent of its total oil from inner Russian and Ural sources this year. Baku, which has been the leading oil center, is not considered strategically safe, and its capacity limits appear to have been reached.

Oil Production Minister N. K. Baibakov said the target level of 35 million tons a year had been reached earlier this year.

It also was disclosed that half of Russia's steel and coal production now comes from the inner areas. Before the war, the Donets Basin in the west was one of the main centers of supply.

receive him in Washington in the concluding conferences of his big power tour. He anticipated that would be some time next week.

Eden Attacks Recognition

Bevin defended the Government's diplomatic recognition of Communist China against the criticism of former foreign secretary Anthony Eden, who led a Conservative assault on policy in the Orient.

Eden contended that the Government's recognition of the new Chinese Regime, not in concert with the United States and the British dominions, had brought no advantage so far and was an unfortunate decision, both in timing and in method.

The Foreign Secretary responded that British recognition served to inform Russia it was not the only country "that was going to do anything at all about China."

"While there was criticism in the United States about our doing it, at the same time we were daily being asked to take over their responsibilities and we were going out, too. I really think we should have lost the Far East forever."

Deplores Red "Blackmail"

While asserting it was always better to be "inside" a country than out, particularly in view of Britain's enormous commercial interests in China, Bevin conceded Eden's point that the Chinese Communists' refusal to establish diplomatic relations was embarrassing and irritating. He hinted it was a form of blackmail, supported by Russia, to force Communist admission to the Security Council, and that Britain would not submit to it.

He said Britain had abstained in the first Council vote on the Communists because China's future was then in transition, and the legal status had not been clarified.

Bevin said Russia had walked out on the assumption it would frighten other nations into yielding. That policy wouldn't work, he said bluntly; but if Russia would come back to the Council and discuss the situation, then Britain might continue its previous efforts to round up the necessary seven votes for admission of the new China.

Pritchett Wins Delay Of Electrocution

The electrocution of Fred S. Pritchett, 39, a mechanic, was postponed yesterday in District Court from May 26 to November 3.

Judge T. Alan Goldsborough granted the delay to give Pritchett an opportunity to have appeals of his case decided. Pritchett was convicted of the first-degree murder shooting last July of Clyde L. King, 50, a railroad engineer.

West Berlin Police Begin Border Patrol

Berlin, May 24 (U.P.).—German police in radio cars started a 24-hour-a-day patrol of the border between Western and Eastern Berlin today to prevent an invasion of the Western city by Communists massing here for a gigantic Whitsuntide "German youth rally."

An estimated 100,000 blue-shirted youths from all over Eastern Germany had arrived here by nightfall and the total was expected to reach 500,000 by Sunday, when the rally reaches its climax.

East German Communists insisted there would be no disorder. But they opened today a savage attack on the Western allies, especially the United States, in speeches and statements calculated to rouse hatred if not to incite violence.

President Wilhelm Pieck of the East German Communist puppet government denounced the Western allies for their wartime bombing of Berlin—much of it in support of the Russian army.

East German Police President Waldemar Schmidt referred to the Western allies as "the enemy."

West German police units moved constantly along the entire 103-mile line separating the Western allied and Soviet-held parts of the capital. Several key bridges between East and West were closed.

Backing them up were 12,000 German police and 8000 allied troops who are ready to throw back any incursion into Western Berlin.

At 4 p. m., Thursday (11 a. m., EDT) the Russians and their German police intend to close the superhighway leading to Western Germany for 46 hours—until 2 p. m., Saturday. If they try to stop American, British and French traffic as well as German traffic, there may be an angry dispute.

Surrender Agreement Reached With Burmese PVO Forces

Rangoon, May 24 (AP).—Burma's harassed government got a preliminary agreement today from one of its three major foes to lay down arms and make peace.

The agreement calls for a country-wide surrender of White Band People's Volunteer Organization (PVO) forces who recently broke away from Communist factions.

A PVO surrender would leave the government army the problem of taking the Communists and the Karen tribesmen who are fighting to set up a state of their own in Burma's many-sided civil war.

PVO Vice President Bo Layaung said he had reached an agreement in principle with Defense Minister General Ne Win for the surrender of PVO fighting men but that details are still to be worked out.

The PVO's, who are estimated to number more than 10,000, are not the most powerful of the government's enemies but they are influential among many Burmese. Originally supporters of the government, they broke away last year because the government refused to negotiate with the Communists.

The other two enemies, Communists and Karens, have lost much territory recently, and the PVO surrender would leave the government forces free to concentrate more on them.

Austria Would Abolish Capital Punishment

Congress Seeks Peek in Chest Of Oriental Gems U. S. Holds

By The Associated Press

An Oriental treasure chest filled with gold and precious gems, and in custody of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, has aroused the curiosity of Congress.

An investigator for the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee has been assigned to the job of getting the details, particularly plans for disposition of the treasure of untold value.

A subcommittee heard about the fabulous chest from former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson during unheralded hearings on legislation dealing with alien property and war claims.

Members disclosed the testimony yesterday.

General MacArthur, Patterson testified, has the key to the chest and is awaiting orders as to disposition of the treasure that Patterson said consists of "jewelry, precious items, gold and foreign currency." It was seized from the Japanese at the end of the war, but the committee does not know where the Japanese got it.

Patterson said the treasure is in Tokyo. He did not estimate its value, but committee members said it was sufficient to "pay a potentate's ransom several times over."

From Gen. Lucius Clay, former American military governor of Germany, the committee received some interesting information on war loot taken from the Nazis.

Clay testified that the invading Americans seized between 250 and 300 million dollars worth of Nazi gold, which was split up among 16 nations claiming reparations from Germany. Russia was not one of them.

The subcommittee, headed by Representative Beckworth (D., Tex.), is studying the claims of war victims for damages. Its members are hopeful that some of the treasures impounded by American troops will be made available to help pay some of the claims.

would produce specific evidence to support the charges against Gold." The judge added that Gold told him he "had made several voluntary statements to Cornelius."

Gold, a round-faced and rotund little man, was described as badly shaken when he appeared before McGranery though he held his emotions in check. McGranery said he spoke "in a low, steady voice" during the proceedings which may have been the first step to the electric chair. He was arrested under the wartime Espionage Act which carries punishment by death or by imprisonment up to 30 years.

An indication that the FBI had another definite target along the trail left by Fuchs in this country was contained in the information upon which the charge against Gold was based. Besides Gold, the information named "John Doe" as a defendant and said he and Gold "did in time of war . . . conspire . . . among themselves and with divers other persons" to violate the Espionage Act. The information said Gold and "John Doe" agreed that Gold "would obtain and receive from one Emil Julius Klaus Fuchs documents, writings, sketches, notes and information relating to the national defense and with intent and reason to believe that it was to be used to the injury of the United States and to the advantage of a foreign nation, to wit, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics."

"John Doe" was identified in the information as "a representative, officer, agent and employe" of the Soviet Union. Gold and "John Doe," it continued, made their agreement "on or about January 1, 1944," and during September, 1945, "did meet and confer together in the vicinity of Jackson Heights, Long Island".

It was revealed here yesterday that, contrary to some reports, Fuchs did not give Gold's name to the FBI. As a matter of fact, the FBI began questioning Gold eight days ago and had him in custody two days before his arrest was announced, considerably before FBI agents began questioning Fuchs in England.

The story of Gold's arrest, as fully confirmed here, was one of painstaking checking, rechecking and elimination until the search narrowed down to him. All Fuchs revealed about his contact was a vague description given at the time of his arrest in England; he said he did not know his name. On this meager information and a knowledge of where Klaus had met his contact to turn over atomic information, the FBI began the search which led to the most unlikely quarry possible: a mild-mannered chemist described by neighbors and professional associates as "the last man you'd suspect."

During eight days of questioning Gold was reported to have denied all knowledge of Fuchs until he was shown to have been in Santa Fe, N. M., after denying he was ever west of the Mississippi River. Then he told agents he was the man they were looking for.

HARRY GOLD
$100,000 Bail set

Gold's father, a 70-year-old cabinet maker, and his brother, Joseph, employed at the Philadelphia Naval Aviation Supply Depot, were shocked at his arrest. Joseph is a veteran of two years' service with the Army in the South Pacific. The elder Gold said Harry had attempted to enlist during the war and was greatly disappointed at his rejection because of high blood pressure.

At the Philadelphia General Hospital, where Gold was employed on a Federally financed rheumatic fever research project, he was described as a "hard worker." A hospital spokesman said he was not engaged in work with "anything that has to do with atomic energy, radium or anything in that line."

The Pennsylvania sugar division of the National Sugar Refining Co. said in a statement that Gold was employed by a subsidiary firm from 1929 to 1938 and from 1940 to 1946 as an assistant chemist.

Joseph Gold said his brother "was never active politically" and as far as he knew never was a Communist. His father, with whom he lived, said Gold never gave any sign he was engaged in any activity resembling espionage.

Gold was transferred yesterday from Moyamensing Prison at Philadelphia to the county prison at Holmesburg. This move was made, according to Dr. Frederick S. Baldi, superintendent of prisons, because "Moyamensing is pretty well overcrowded."

Gold had been held at Moyamensing, Baldi said, in a separate cell with a guard at the door.

McCarthy Accuses State Dept. of 'Fraud' in Lattimore Case

Republican Senator McCarthy yesterday accused the State Department of trying to sell the American people a "deliberate fraud and deception" in the case of Owen Lattimore.

The Wisconsin legislator said he will "expose" the alleged deception in a speech tonight before a convention of Catholic editors at Rochester, N. Y.

At that time, he said, he will make public the photographic copies of "pertinent parts" of Government loyalty files bearing on the Lattimore case.

McCarthy has named Lattimore, a Johns Hopkins University professor and occasional State Department consultant on Far East affairs, as Russia's No. 1 spy in the United States. Lattimore has denied the charge under oath and called McCarthy a liar.

McCarthy told newsmen the files he plans to disclose are from the loyalty records of the old Office of War Information (OWI). He said the original documents are now held by the State Department.

During the war, Lattimore served as deputy director of OWI in charge of Pacific operations.

The State Department has declared it has no loyalty file on Lattimore and said the Far East expert was never on its pay roll.

[McCarthy referred on the Senate floor yesterday to "the Washington Daily Worker, commonly known as The Washington Post."

[He was citing a front page story of a speech by Attorney General J. Howard McGrath saying that Federal law enforcement agencies knew every Communist in the United States.

["I sincerely hope the Attorney General has been misquoted," McCarthy said.

[The Attorney General was not misquoted.—Editor's note.]

In explaining why he plans to make the documents public, McCarthy said in a statement:

"If this were merely for the purpose of furnishing a link in the Lattimore chain of evidence, I would not produce these files in public at this time.

"It is necessary, however, to make these files available to the public to expose the deliberate fraud and deception which the State Department attempted to sell the American people in its white paper, in which it tried to discredit the facts and evidence which I have produced."

McCarthy told reporters he meant the "white paper" issued by Assistant Secretary of State Edward W. Barrett in reply to a speech McCarthy made to the American Society of Newspaper Editors on April 20.

McCarthy said if he were "merely to inform" the public of what is in the OWI files, he knew what would happen.

"Acheson's official spokesman, backed up by all the power and prestige of the State Department, would say, 'McCarthy lies. There is no such evidence in the files'," The Senator said.

"Therefore, I feel I have no choice but to make those files public."

Meanwhile, two Democrats were compelled yesterday to erase from the permanent record of House proceedings remarks they had made about McCarthy.

On last Monday, Representatives Biemiller (D., Wis.) and Wayne L. Hays (D., Ohio) spoke of McCarthy's charges that Communists infest the State Department. They also put certain newspaper comments about McCarthy into the Congressional Record.

Yesterday, Representative Hoffman (R., Mich.) objected that they had violated a House rule forbidding members to say on the House floor or put in the record anything reflecting on a Senator.

Adler-Draper Suit Near Jury

Hartford, Conn., May 24 (AP).—Counsel for Larry Adler and Paul Draper told a Federal jury today that "red herrings" had been used in an attempt to brand the entertainers as pro-Communist.

Summing up in the entertainers' libel suit, Attorney Thew Wright, Jr., said the conduct of the two performers showed they were loyal Americans, and did not follow the Communist line.

Draper, the dancer, and harmonica player Adler are suing Mrs. Hester McCullough of Greenwich, Conn., for $200,000. They charge she hurt their reputations and caused them to lose bookings by accusing them of pro-Communist leanings.

Federal Judge J. Joseph Smith said the case will go to the jury Friday, after he makes his charge.

Wright said the "acid test for both Communists and fellow-travelers" was whether they followed the Communist line by opposing the Allied war effort during the Hitler-Stalin pact of 1939-41.

During this time, he added, both Adler and Draper "gave lavishly of their time to British war relief."

When the party line reverted to a policy of non-cooperation with the Allies after V-J Day, Wright said, "where were Adler and Draper?"

"They were both overseas entertaining for the armed forces," he added. "I suppose they had a special dispensation from Uncle Joe."

Art Group Opens Anniversary Meeting

Some 400 delegates were in Washington yesterday for opening sessions of the forty-first anniversary convention of the American Federation of Arts, which concludes today.

Meetings today will be at the National Gallery.

Forums are slated on "The Museum and Its Community," with Thomas Brown Rudd, president of Munson-Williams-Proctor Institute, Utica, N. Y., as chairman, and "Government and Art," with Henry R. Hope, head of the fine arts department of Indiana University and president of the College Art Association, as chairman.

General Clay, Others Praise Post Proposal

powerful enough to be heard."

Lewis B. Williams, chairman, National City Bank of Cleveland—"Your editorial page presentation is one of solemn import and dreadful urgency. It carries a 'sane suggestion for a rational approach to the protection of our national safety. I most heartily commend its character and form."

J. B. Black of San Francisco, president, Pacific Gas and Electric Co.,—"Congratulations upon The Post's editorial, "The Road Back to America," republished in the San Francisco Chronicle. It has attracted wide attention and should lead to constructive and patriotic thinking throughout the country. Suggested action may be means of strengthening confidence in our institutions and ourselves in these strained and troublesome times."

Representative Kenneth B. Keating (R., N. Y.): "Regrettable as it is that the condition exists, it is probably a fact that something in the nature of a commission of national security, as envisioned in the interesting suggestion by The Washington Post, is probably desirable. The obvious tragedy, perhaps not adequately covered in the editorial, is that the incompetence of the Administration, widespread corruption in high places and an inexcusably complacent attitude in the past toward the subversive forces at work in the Government have brought about a situation which requires delegation of executive functions to a group of private citizens. Yet the security of our country must come first. The Post is to be commended for calling attention to the serious state of our national life."

Andre Visson, correspondent of the Reader's Digest, said The Post editorial was "one of the landmarks in the American press of the last decades." He added:

"You have rendered an exceptional service to this country—and to the entire western world—by presenting the paramount problem of real national security.

"Everyone is today only too well aware of the great danger caused by the 'seeds of treason,' but you put the finger on the no lesser danger—the 'seeds of distrust.' Trojan horses have destroyed great kingdoms. But the confusion and distrust in the Tower of Babel did as much, if not more harm. And if we do not watch our step, we may find our will to resist the danger from without paralyzed by fear, suspicion and distruct . . . Heartiest congratulations!"

Frank Altschul, New York business executive,—"Congratulations on your splendid editorial. It is being commented on most favorably on many sides. This is the sort of thing that makes The Washington Post a great newspaper."

Edward Weeks, editor, Atlantic Monthly,—"Your unsparing, reassuring editorial tells the people what they have been waiting to hear, and your proposal for a citizens commission on national security points the American way out of our confused and fearful thinking."

Thomas D'Arcy Brophy, chairman of the board, Kenyon & Eckhard, Inc., and president, American Heritage Foundation, 1947-48 (Freedom Train),—"I applaud your proposal as a practical measure looking toward re-establishment of confidence in responsible government people. As you state, (the) margin of safety today is not great enough to be reckless and wasteful with talents and idealism of public spirited citizens. We must find the way back to traditional American confidence in government."

New Sousa Junior High School Dedicated To Sound of Bandmaster's Marching Music

The Washington Post

KEY PRESENTED—Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, presents the key to Sousa Junior High School to principal, Miss Eleanor P. McAuliffe (left) at dedication ceremonies last night in presence of Miss Jane Pricilla Sousa, daughter of John Philip Sousa, and his sister, Mrs. Helen Sousa Abert. The school, named in honor of the March King, is located at 37th and Ely sts. se.

Dedication ceremonies at Sousa Junior High School last night were punctuated by John Philip Sousa's marching music and speeches by Sousa's daughter and the school principal.

Miss Eleanor P. McAuliffe, the principal, received the keys to the building from Dr. Hobart M. Corning, District Superintendent of Schools.

In her address Miss McAuliffe said:

"We want to develop an educational system to take advantage of the facilities of this modern building. We already have a tradition. We have a school orchestra, a P-TA and a print shop.

Even Have Archives

"In fact, we even have a school archivist and we have something in the archives!

"We will do our best to make the school worthy of its namesake, John Philip Sousa."

Miss Jane Priscilla Sousa, daughter of the bandmaster and composer, presented the school with a 15-cent baton, "the kind he always used." A gold band on the baton bore the date and noted the occasion.

Baton Accepted

The baton was accepted by Joe Smith, president of the student body. His father, William J. Smith, president of the Sousa Parent-Teacher Association, also spoke.

Lieut. Col. Carlin D. Whitesell, jr., Assistant Engineer Commissioner, who represented the District Commissioners, said, "I have watched this building grow, and I have a deep sense of personal satisfaction in its completion."

C. Melvin Sharpe, president of the Board of Education, presided.

The invocation was pronounced by Dr. T. T. Roberts, Minnesota Avenue Christian Church, and the benediction by Rev. James H. Brooks, Our Lady Queen of Peace Church.

The Marine Corps Band played "Stars and Stripes Forever" and "Presidential Polonaise" by Sousa. The school choir sang.

Helen Wickes Loses Suit For Custody

Pretty Helen Arleene Wickes, 25, whose gay marriage disintegrated in Buenos Aires, yesterday lost her suit to get support from her husband and custody of her 2-year-old daughter, Judy.

Judge F. Dickinson Letts of District Court said he didn't have jurisdiction and, even if he did, she hadn't proved her case.

He made his decison after Mrs. Wickes' attorney, John A. Croghan, denounced her estranged husband, Robert Boal Wickes, 46, member of a prominent Virgina family and now residing with his mother in Mount Vernon.

Mrs. Wickes, who resides in Providence, R. I., declared that her husband refused to take her into his confidence, treated her as a mere housekeeper, beat her and then made her exhibit her bruises in a bathing suit in front of her friends.

House Votes For Draft

draft extension if the President were allowed to declare an emergency and order inductions if Congress was not in session.

House Majority Leader John McCormack of Massachusetts and others yesterday criticized the bill for being "too weak" in not going far enough this way, though supporting it.

Representatives Leo Allen (R., Ill.) and Frank R. Havenner (D., Calif.), along with many other opponents of the original act, supported the watered-down version yesterday.

Only three members spoke against it—Republicans Hoffman of Michigan and Rich of Pennsylvania, and New York's Vito Marcantonio (ALP).

Before passing the bill, the House members voted down, 107 to 23, an amendment by Representative Adam Powell (D., N. Y.) to end all racial segregation in the armed forces. They also defeated a motion of Representative A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) to delay any further registration until Congress returns next January.

Democrats Are Needled

Miller kept needling Vinson and the Democrats for what he called "conflicting" statements by President Truman, Defense Secretary Louis Johnson and Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Mr. Truman, he recalled, has said that world conditions are better than in 1946 and declared that Johnson was very confident of our strength. Vinson had said the committee had acted after hearing Bradley behind closed doors on the "seriousness of the situation."

"Who's right—Mr. Truman, General Bradley or Johnson?" Miller demanded. "What can I tell my constituents."

"You can advise your constituents that the Armed Services Committee is following General Bradley," Vinson replied.

'Yankee' Baptists Now 'American'

Boston, May 24 (U.P.).—The Northern Baptist Convention voted at its annual meeting today to change its name to the American Baptist Convention.

The 3000 delegates approved the change by a large majority vote and then heard a plea that they act as missionaries for Christ by giving America the "character that will fit her for her responsibilities in the world."

U. S. Employe Health Plans Are Discussed

The virtues and faults of Federal policy on health programs for United States employes were discussed yesterday at an all-day conference at the GSA auditorium.

The meeting was called by the Federal Personnel Council and the Society for Personnel Administration to foster the development of health programs in line with a White House policy statement of January 9.

The statement limits the establishment of services to groups of at least 300 employes working in a single building or group of adjoining buildings.

T. Roy Reid, director of personnel of the Department of Agriculture, pointed out that this limitation would cut 84 percent of his department's workers out of the program. An Interior Department spokesman said many employes in his agency would be similarly cut out.

Mrs. Mary Cushing Niles, assistant to the chairman of the Federal Personnel Council, told reporters that although legislation authorizing health programs had been passed by the Seventy-ninth Congress, only a few agencies had so far established such programs.

Most of these, she said, were concentrated in this area.

The council, she declared, hoped that yesterday's conference would stimulate agency managers to submit budget requests in time to set up programs in fiscal 1952.

The President's statement put the maximum permissible cost at $8 per year per employe, unless abnormal health or accident risks warrant more money.

Care Urged In School Expansion

A warning "to go slow" on a recommended Arlington County school building program costing roughly 8.7 million dollars through 1953 has been issued by County Treasurer John Locke Green.

In a letter to Warren Cox, recently retired chairman of the Arlington County Council of Parents and Teachers Associations, Green said: ". . . notwithstanding the fact that we need more schools and more classrooms, we ought to go slow about a bond issue; and before anything else, let us look into the high cost of construction under the present bond fund.

"If this high cost of construction were to continue throughout the whole school program, the school system in Arlington County would require at least 40 million dollars; and no man in his right mind would say this county would stand a 40-million-dollar school program in the space of four or five years," he wrote.

Green charged that the average cost of elementary classrooms now under construction, exclusive of sites and architects' fees, is $53,512.70, instead of the $33,000 used as a basis for estimates by the P-TA Council.

"Either your estimate is completely wrong . . . or administrators of the construction program have proved themselves grossly incapable of spending the bond money . . .," Green concluded.

Plane Lands Safely After Radio Trouble

Police said nearby air fields were alerted yesterday morning when an Air Force C-47 developed radio trouble as it was about to land through an overcast at Andrews Air Force Base, Md.

The pilot, Brig. Gen. H. B. Thatcher, lost contact with the control tower about 11:30 a. m., according to base officials. The plane was kept circling at 4000 feet for more than 15 minutes, until contact was made through an emergency frequency, officials said. The plane landed safely. Gen Thatcher was accompanied by his copilot, Maj. R. P. Sanford, and two passengers. The plane was on a flight from Mitchel Air Force Base, N. Y.

Sewer Bond Issue Sold By Fairfax

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors yesterday authorized sale of $3,000,000 worth of sewerage bonds to the Baltimore firm of Alex Brown and Son, lowest of two bidders on the issue.

The award was authorized after the firm proposed an interest rate of 2.57383 percent, in comparison with the rate of 2.63306 offered by Shields and Co., of New York City. A representative of a third bonding company was disqualified from the bidding because he arrived 30 seconds after the scheduled opening of bids at 2:15 p. m.

The bonds, repayable over a 30-year period, will be used to finance an extensive program of sewers and disposal facilities in Sanitary District No. 1, whose voters approved the expenditure in a public referendum last August 30.

Following award of the bond contract, James J. Corbalis, the county's sanitary engineer, said work on the program would be started by July 1 and would be completed in from 1½ to 2 years. He said first work will be undertaken in the heavily populated Groveton area.

Proposed Montgomery County Building

The Washington Post

IN STEP WITH PROGRESS—The Montgomery County government plans the erection of a new county office building and health wing at an estimated cost of $1,388,500. Above is a drawing of the proposed structure by architect Ronald S. Senseman

County Plans Offices Costing Over $1 Million

Montgomery County is planning a modern, $1,388,500 county office building at Rockville.

County Manager Irving G. McNayr yesterday released details of the project, together with plans for remodeling the county courthouse.

The new building would be on S. Perry st., near the telephone company building in Rockville, extending onto Welsh Field.

Of the total cost, $1,192,500 will be paid by the county, and the remainder by the Federal Government under the Hill-Burton Act.

The office building and attached health wing will house departments of health, welfare, public works, finance, public safety, and inspection and licenses. There will also be space for the office of the Maryland Extension Service, including the county agent and the home demonstration agent; the board of zoning appeals, the county personnel board, county surveyor, county attorney, and county manager, including the purchasing bureau.

The health wing will contain clinics for mental hygiene, tuberculosis, venereal disease, maternal care, child hygiene, diagnostic medical care, and eye care. This section will also contain a "health lecture hall."

The office section of the new building will be five stories high. The health section will be three. The office structure will cost $943,000 and the health section, $445,000.

Officials estimate it will take 12 to 15 months to complete construction.

The courthouse will continue to house the county jail and the offices of the State's Attorney and the law library.

White House Repairs Ahead of Time

The Commission on Renovation of the Executive Mansion met yesterday and reported that the job of reconstructing the White House is ahead of schedule and within its budget.

Maj. Gen. Glen E. Edgerton, executive director of the commission, said the date for completion of the job is still October, 1951.

Most of the work is still "tearing down," rather than "building up," he declared. So the job isn't half finished yet.

Virtually completed is the project of driving 126 concrete piers as underpinning to support the walls and floors.

The commission will announce its decision on disposal of reconstruction souvenirs after the June 15 deadline for answering its questionnaire to Congressmen.

MEATS

--and the "BEST" of course, means GIANT TopNotch BEEF

GIANT buyers are instructed to pay whatever price is necessary in order to get "top notch" quality to assure "top" satisfaction. U. S. Department of Agriculture quotations on western dressed meats show that each grade, whether "good" or "choice", has a wholesale price difference as high as 4c a pound. Therefore, if it is possible to pay as much as 4c a pound difference for the same grade, there must be a difference in the quality. You'll be better satisfied with GIANT beef! Practice "the GIANT shopping habit".

NOTE Everyone recognizes ARMOUR AND COMPANY as the country's outstanding supplier of fine meat products. Who, then, is better qualified to write of the quality of beef GIANT buys in such quantities from this source for its thousands of customers? Quoting from a recent letter ARMOUR wrote GIANT about this matter, "only 12 out of every 100 (cattle) are acceptable for GIANT 'Top Notch' Beef!"

Virginia Labor Group Again Chooses Smith

Roanoke, Va., May 24 (AP).—The Virginia State Federation of Labor closed its 54th annual convention today by electing officers and raising funds to carry on an intensified political fight during the coming year.

For the sixth consecutive year, Jack S. Smith of Buckroe Beach was elected Federation president.

In one of two contested elections, Frank Adams of Richmond displaced incumbent A. E. Wilson of Roanoke as vice president.

In the other contested election, Smith was named alternate delegate to the national AFL convention over L. A. Trainham.

The other balloting was done merely for the sake of form. Candidates were unopposed.

I. C. Welsted was reelected secretary-treasurer and named as delegate to the national con.ention.

One incipient fight never materialized. Five candidates were nominated for the four posts of executive board member-at-large. But the convention adopted a constitutional amendment increasing the number of members-at-large from four to five.

Those elected were: Luther Barrett of Jarrett; Dave Alston of Norfolk; O. J. Shaw of Petersburg; A. J. Monroe of Richmond; and William Gray of Washington, D. C.

Members-at-large to the executive board are Negroes who represent various industries.

Regional executive board members elected include E. R. Hubbard of Alexandria and R. L. Barnes of Winchester.

Woman Helps Nab Annoying Phone Caller

A fast-talking, 32-year-old married woman was credited yesterday by police with aiding in the arrest of a 42-year-old District resident who specialized in indecent phone calls.

The woman talked with the anonymous caller for more than a half-hour while police traced the call to a home 20 blocks away. While the conversation was still in process, police banged at suspect's door, and he told the woman he had to hang up to answer the knock.

Police called her back and put the suspect on the phone. She identified his voice as that which had been making proposals.

The detective work followed a complaint made earlier in the day by the woman, who said she had been getting anonymous calls. She was told to hold the man on the phone as long as possible and a police cruiser made periodic checks.

Pvts. Larry V. Denny and V. C. Rautsaw called during a conversation.

Razor Blade Operation Fails, Dentist Dies

A doctor at Bethesda Naval Hospital yesterday cut the throat of his friend with a razor blade in a desperate but futile attempt to save the man's life.

The shaving blade, most handy cutting instrument, was wielded in an emergency operation in the officers' barracks there in a seconds-count effort to save the life of Lieut. Philip R. Lynch, 38, of Manistee, Mich.

The victim had been seized with a violent choking spell in his bed early yesterday, hospital officials said. To get vitally-needed air into his lungs, they said, his doctor friend, Lieut. Charles Francis, of Detroit, cut into the throat to clear the windpipe.

The operation is called a tracheotomy. It consists of cutting the windpipe clear, and inserting a tube to permit the patient to continue to breathe.

Even as the emergency operation was being performed, Naval Hospital doctors were responding with instruments and other equipment. But the prompt operation, heart stimulants, oxygen and other measures failed to save Lieut. Lynch's life.

Lieut. Lynch, a dentist, was attending a week-long course conducted at the medical center for Naval Reserve officers.

Officials said last night that the cause of death was still undetermined. It may be another week, they said, before autopsy findings are complete.

Lafayette School Marks Sesqui Today

The District sesquicentennial will be celebrated by students of the Lafayette Elementary School at a May Day festival today at 10:30 a. m.

Students will take part in scenes portraying the early days of Washington. The scenes include an Indian ceremonial dance; early forms of transportation; a Presidential inaugural parade; the busy port of old Georgetown, and the presentation of the Japanese cherry trees.

Old Georgetown "TAP TASTE" TEST Convinces Experienced Bartenders

❶ "Can you taste the difference?" we asked Washington bartenders. Right behind the bar we went. One glass we filled with Old Georgetown Beer poured from a bottle.

❸ One glass . . . then the other . . . was tasted. Which glass had the bottled beer? Which had the draft beer? In every case the answer was the same. "Both have that good draft beer taste!" The bottled beer tasted as delicious as the draft.

Many beer drinkers believe that DRAFT BEER DRAWN FROM THE KEG IS THE BEST TASTING OF ALL!

Here's how OLD GEORGETOWN brings it to You!

Prove to yourself that this is the finest glass of Beer you've ever tasted

...with that Old Time "On Tap" Draft Beer Flavor in Bottles and Cans

Are you skeptical? Try the "Tap Taste" Test and you'll be convinced. Not only that—you'll do yourself a favor too. For once you've enjoyed the refreshing goodness of a cool glass of Old Georgetown, you'll realize that in Washington you don't need to pay a premium price for premium quality beer.

FOR REAL ENJOYMENT—DRINK THE BEER THAT PUTS KEG FLAVOR "ON TAP" AT HOME!

From now on you can enjoy at home that old time "on tap" taste that makes every glassful of beer as smooth and flavorful as if it came right out of the keg. Ask for Old Georgetown in your favorite package store today. Keep it always on hand for home enjoyment.

"STOP-STEP" PROCESS WAS DISCOVERED HERE!

An exciting innovation in the brewing art! Old Georgetown's special "Stop-step" process was created through constant laboratory testing right in our own brewery. The result is split-second control that drops temperature 25 degrees in less than 2 minutes (30 to 90 times faster than usual processes). Pasteurization ceases instantaneously. The true keg flavor of draft beer is "sealed in." That's why Old Georgetown gives you extra enjoyment!

liquidator of war assets, to be an acting member of the Federa' Maritime Board. The chairman of the Maritime Board receives a salary of $16,000 a year, and the members $15,000 a year. When Mr. Truman makes permanent nominations for the board, they will go to the Senate for confirmation.

In yesterday's shakeup of the Maritime Commission, four of the five $12,000-a-year members were dropped, at least for the present. They were Grenville Mellen, Raymond S. McKeough, Joseph K. Carson, jr., and David Coddaire.

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, acting after the White House announcement, issued a letter delegating limited powers to the new Maritime Board and reserving others for himself. ## Meeting Asks Freedom Fair porary committee which led the rally.

Within 48 hours, Kamerow announced, the new citizens' committee would be called to a meeting to elect officers and take further action.

As the ground rules for the meeting, Kamerow ordered a time limit of 3½ minutes for each speech, elimination of personalities or politics, and debate on legal technicalities.

Therefore no alternative was suggested to the ruling of the Attorney General that led to the executive committee action. He ruled that legislation authorizing the exposition did not legally permit formation of a nonprofit corporation to handle the show.

In an opening statement, Jerome B. McKee, president of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations, said "there is no time to seek further legislation."

A management group sampling industry, McKee said, had informed him that business would lease 1½ million square feet of space at $30 per foot, thus providing $45,000,000.

The Washington Board of Trade, through Thomas J. Groom, first vice president, expressed this stand on the fair: The commission must decide in the light of reported legal opinion that the fair cannot be carried forward under existing legislation. The board urged the commission to proceed immediately with the rest of the Sesquicentennial program.

Frank E. Weakly, president of the Hotel Association of Washington, said, similarly, "We believe that with the difficulties facing a new plan for reviving Freedom Fair, all efforts of the citizens of Washington should be devoted to making the events scheduled for the balance of 1950 an outstanding success."

The tone of most of the other speakers, however, showed a pronounced preference for the fair, despite the obstacles.

The Rev. J. A. Pfeiffer, representing the Washington Federation of Churches: "We're heartily in favor of this organization doing what it can to promote the reality of the fair."

Frank O'Connor, representing the Washington Central Labor Union and the Washington Building Trades Council, offered the services of his organizations to put the plans across.

Mrs. Ernest Howard, president of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association: "We believe the Freedom Fair could do more good than all the plastic or synthetic diplomats that could be sent all over the world."

Clifford H. Newell, president of the Arkansas Avenue Community Citizens Association, said he felt "deeply humiliated that such a meeting is necessary."

Representatives of the Gold Star Mothers, the Elks, the National Alliance of Postal Employes, the Federation of Civic Associations, the Sons of the American Revolution, the United Spanish War Veterans, the CIO, the Society of Natives, the D. C. Life Underwriters Association, the Federation of P-TA's, and the Odd Fellows, also backed the fair.

Earlier yesterday, the sesqui executive committee voted to liquidate its $30,000 housing bureau, set up four weeks ago to help find accomdations for the anticipated 300,000 weekly influx of visitors to the fair.

Carter T. Barron, Sesqui executive vice chairman, said the committee "does not now anticipate the Freedom Fair will come off."

'The Thinkers' Talk, Sift Their Problems

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

On "The Hill" there is a group who call themselves "The Thinkers."

They meet about once a week, start their sessions with a silent prayer. Then one member of the group suggests a topic for that day's discussion.

These "men" average about 16 years of age. They are on "The Hill" either because the Juvenile Court for the District of Columbia or the Federal Government sent them there.

"The Hill" is the National Training School for Boys.

"The Thinkers" are a group of Negro boys who asked for group therapy at the school.

Since the program was started about two years ago, both psychiatrists and psychologists have been giving group therapy to boys at NTS, helping them to solve their problems by talking them out; getting them ready to go back "On the Street."

The program is now being carried out by three psychologists assigned by the United States Public Health Service. These informal "docs" use three methods of approach. One is to the new boys, who have just been admitted to the school.

They are shown film strips, and asked to interpret what those film strips mean to them:

Picture of a man "blowing his top." Interpretation: "When a guy blows his top some one has done something to him."

Picture of Uncle Sam pouring medicine from a bottle marked "rehabilitation" into the protesting mouth of a boy. Interpretation: "The Government is trying to make us reform. But they can't feed us reform medicine without a guy wanting to take it. He might spit it out."

As the psychologist switches the film strips, he tries to knead the minds of the boys before him by suggestion. He uses a summing-up method, repeating phrases they have spoken to tie their thoughts together in a cohesive pattern.

In this initial phase of group action, the boys sit on benches in a darkened room to watch the film strips. They may wander about, if they wish. There is no set place for them to sit. They may talk to each other—ignore the psychologist. He listens carefully to the ones who do advance ideas; gets an inkling of the way in which their minds are disturbed.

A second method of approach is use the boys as individuals and as groups in a program similar to that used by Alcoholics Anonymous: you can solve your own problem because other people have had it; this is what they did about it.

This group is composed of volunteers. They sit informally around a conference table in a small room.

Here is an excerpt from a wire-recording of one of their discussions. Purpose of this talk is to help "Smith" solve his problems. He is on The Hill for car theft. The psychologist is in the room, only speaks to guide the discussion:

Smith: "I mean it's not everything I do. It's just certain things that my mother does—I mean she's—I don't mind—I mean I don't care myself, but the least she could do is stop drinking and stuff she never did do before."

Chairman: "That's her business."

Smith: "It feels bad for a boy to walk down the street, as I said the other day—for a boy to walk down the street and nobody to talk to him, and to know his mother's a drunk. It makes you feel bad."

Chairman: "It felt bad for your Mom to walk down the street, and somebody to say her son's out swiping cars."

Smith: "No, you see, because she has just as bad a reputation as I have—see what I mean?"

Chairman: "O. K., then, there you are."

Held Seeking Affection

Group member: "It appears that Smith is looking more for affection than anything else, because he figured it up when he was 12 he didn't get the affection that a mother should give a child and maybe he looked for affection where he didn't get any."

Chairman: "Could be."

Another member of group: "A few people talked to me. Maybe he might have a case like mine—but—uh—his people—the way he talks, his people they haven't forgot about him—not completely. Maybe they didn't give him much affection in the past."

Group member: "Did you ever just try to go right up and tell her, Smithy?"

Smith: "Yeah, I tried."

Group member: "I mean just to come right out and say, 'Mom, please, now please don't do that.' I mean just say, 'Mom, stop!' "

"It Doesn't Look Nice"

Smith: "I have, I've said, 'Look,' I said, 'it doesn't look nice'; I didn't say it in that way, I mean, 'I'd like for you to stop that for my benefit and your benefit or my grandmother's benefit.' I didn't exactly tell her I wanted her to stop—but I mean, I asked her, but I couldn't come right out and tell her that I wanted her to stop."

Group member: "I think he's kinda hiding behind his mother. What do you think, Dock? I mean I don't think that his mother is a real problem. I don't think that his mother is a real problem at all, I think he's just using that to hide the real thing that he is running away from."

Smith: "I'm solving my problems at the same time. In other words, I'm solving my problem by trying to find out how to make my mother stop. I'm asking you all, how to go about trying to get my mother out of the habit."

Group member: "I think that we have talked about his mother too much. I mean he hasn't said nothing about himself much or about taking the car. I mean more about his mother—the trouble about his mother and father and he wants to solve his mother and father's problems." . . .

"Didn't Want to Work"

Another group member: "He didn't want to work and he wanted to live like others, so he went out and stole. I mean I think that is what is causing this thing. I don't think you find but a few times but what a boy don't want to work."

Chairman: "It seems the way it all wound up, every time we say something it all winds up to look like it's your Mom's fault."

Smith: "I'm not altogether using my Mom for a chief fault. I'm not blaming everything on her. I'm not blaming everything on me, but about half and half, I guess. Maybe it's still even lower, or maybe more my fault than it would be hers, see; or half and half."

Chairman: "If you want your mother to do right, you wouldn't have gone out and done wrong, so your mother didn't have nothing to do but keep on going out and do wrong."

Smith: "Yes, she did. I just said I wanted to get away from it all. I'd get away from it all."

Filled With Race Consciousness

The Thinkers are another group-type with which the psychologists are working. They are aggressive Negro boys, filled with race consciousness. When they started their group, all were hostile to whites. They had no hope that anything could be done about their own cases.

After some group therapy, one boy decided when he got back "On the Street" he would go back to school, get a law degree, to be able to fight prejudice in a legal fashion.

The psychologists do not consider the therapy program as a cure-all. Most of the NTS boys stay "On the Hill" about a year. That isn't much time to give them to "straighten themselves out."

A recent summary by the psychologists of the effectiveness of the program states:

"It seems that the keystone . . . is the feeling concerning authority and rejection which is, in turn, closely tied to the feeling of hopelessness and change. For example, if the members of the group are able to freely express their feelings about authority and rejection, without retaliation by the group leader, then it seems they are capable of expressing some hope for change in the future. Resistance to the concept of looking at past events seems to be lessened in direct ratio to the ability to express feelings concerning authority, and the hope that there is a chance for change in the future."

FAIRFAX COUNTY'S SCHOOL CRISIS

by Agnes E. Meyer

Can parents and teachers cushion the educational crisis in Fairfax County? That's a question Agnes E. Meyer answers in this series of two articles in The Washington Post.

In these articles, Mrs. Meyer clearly shows the dangerous, overcrowded conditions in Fairfax County schools. She describes the poor and inadequate facilities in many of the schools and points out that funds are desperately needed to solve the problem. And she tells how the outmoded county government, created for earlier days and overwhelmed by sudden expansion, is unable to cope with the critical situation.

No taxpayer, educator or parent in Fairfax County can afford to miss this series on the vital subject of educating America's future citizens.

TRAILWAYS BUS TERMINAL
Dial District 4200

A lady told us the other day that she had traveled more in recent months than she had in several years because of Trailways thru-coach service. In the past she didn't like to change coaches and baggege en route. Trailways thru coaches stopped all that, she said, for now she boards Trailways Silverliners in Washington and gets off at her destination nearly 500 miles distant, with no worries about connections, changing seats, baggage transfers, traffic worries, or anything else. She just relaxes and enjoys the scenery which is always best along the highways.

You'll like Trailways Thru service, too, for they also save time and money. You'll have money to spare when you get there due to Trailways regular low fares and reduced excursion rates now on sale. For thru and local schedules and fares, call the terminal below.

Squeeze On Hospitals

Washington's hospitals are charitable institutions, but they are in no way equipped to subsidize the District government. That is precisely what they will be doing if the flagrantly irresponsible House cut in funds for care of patients referred to hospitals by the District is allowed to stand. The fiscal 1950 appropriation for care of so-called "tax eligible" cases was $745,000, and the District Commissioners requested the same amount for 1951. Instead, the House, at the instigation of the District Appropriations Subcommittee, slashed it to $500,000. If this is not remedied, the hospitals—unless they are to adopt a totally new role and refuse to accept patients—will be forced to make up their losses out of endowments.

Actually, there is a strong case for raising rather than lowering the rates paid for care of District-referred patients. The $745,000 appropriation in fiscal 1950 was based on a charge of $9 per day for patients in hospitals and $2 per clinical visit. The hospitals had asked that the daily rate be raised to cover the average weighted cost of $14.80; even Gallinger, the municipal hospital, has an average daily patient cost of $11.26. The difference is accounted for by the fact that patients at Gallinger usually stay longer, and thus the higher first-day cost is spread out.

Perhaps the House was laboring under the misconception that the hospitals are receiving a subsidy. Far from it. There is an important distinction between cases referred by the District Permit Bureau and so-called medical indigents who can pay for part but not all of their hospital care. Hospitals receive funds through the Community Chest for care of medical indigents. But the care of tax-eligible cases is on a strictly contractual basis; the District government has contracts with nine hospitals because Gallinger is not able to take all the tax-eligible patients. Hospitals receive no additional reimbursement for their care of District-referred patients—and the case load, which was 47,000 in fiscal 1949, is growing because of liberalized classifications.

To require hospitals already in financial straits to subsidize care which the District government is contractually bound to pay for is to indulge in a form of chiseling which we hope the Senate will slap down promptly.

GM And UAW

The wage agreement between General Motors and the United Automobile Workers is a notable document and a great event in industrial history. It is a better contract than the one that the union succeeded in obtaining from the Chrysler Corp. after a prolonged and costly strike. More than that, it runs for the unprecedented period of five years, and is not reopenable by either party. That five-year clause is constructive and heartening. From now on the company will be able to carry on its operations without being bedeviled by strikes or new wage demands; the workers will be insured against loss of wages caused by strikes; and union leaders will be relieved from pressure to strengthen their hold on the rank-and-file membership by frequent demands for wage increases.

The great shortcoming about short-term contracts, with provisions for reopening wage clauses, is that they are hardly signed before new union demands are made. The result is that collective bargaining, instead of being a stabilizing factor, becomes a disruptive influence. Suppose five-year contracts were the rule rather than the exception. In that event union heads would be able to devote more time to a study of long-range objectives and organizational problems. And both labor and management would be afforded an opportunity to establish closer working relationships. We hesitate to use a shopworn phrase and descry "a new era" in industrial relations, but at least we can say a vista of interesting possibilities of industrial cooperation is opened up.

To be sure, a business depression might make it impossible for even the strongest company to comply with the terms of a five-year wage contract; no contract can provide complete protection against future disaster. However, long-term wage agreements minimize the chances of a slump by affording safeguards against the kind of recurrent strikes in mass-production industries which constitute a major threat to industrial stability. For this reason GM has provided an example which other strong companies might well follow. Here is industrial statesmanship at its best, and the agreement reflects the greatest credit both on GM and the UAW. We echo Federal Mediator Cyrus Ching in saying, "When both sides accept their full responsibility . . . and settle their differences between them, it is a very encouraging thing in the field of labor relations and marks a milestone in the progress of collective bargaining."

Commission On Security

The reaction throughout the country to our extended editorial, "The Road Back to America," on Monday is encouraging. The reaction indicates conclusively that our feeling of dismay over the fear and frustration left in the public mind by the divisive wrangling over disloyalty and security is generally shared. On the whole, too, the prescription we threw out is acceptable to leaders in many walks of life—a commission on the national security made up of outstanding citizens without regard to party. That commission is intended to enlighten, not to carry out; to guide, not to exercise functions of government; to divert the pastime of kicking through the domestic goal into constructive effort in stating and clarifying the facts by a body commanding public confidence.

Some commentators think the suggestion is too inclusive. That would be a justifiable charge if the commission were to be told in one mandate to solve, even to illuminate, all the problems of the national security. What we had in view, rather, was the adoption of a technique that all Presidents in modern history have used whenever a problem of national concern has appeared which was clearly incapable of solution by existing methods. Even Mr. Roosevelt did not disdain it. In spite of the fact that he had admitted two Republicans into his Cabinet, he went outside the Government to enlist a commission for a report on the dimensions and the solution of the rubber problem. Surely an occasion has again arisen for recourse to the same method. The public mind is agitated and anxious over an issue which is getting lost in politics, namely, the condition of our internal security, and this is thus a proper responsibility to assign to an outside commission.

Moreover, the commission idea, once accepted in this tradition by the Truman Administration, could well become part of the Administration's armory in coping with these uniquely difficult, if not emergency, times. The President has said that he is trying to set up a roster of talent for aid in tackling problems of great moment. He had administrative jobs, of course, in mind. But a commission on the national security could be a permanent body to be drawn upon in panels whenever matters of national concern need to be lifted out of politics or call for more than technical treatment. That is why we included within the scope of this commission the tasks mentioned by Senator Vandenberg and by Dr. James Bryant Conant.

These are not ordinary times. They are abnormal times, and extraordinary measures are necessary to deal with them. It is imperative, to start with, to use this device to depoliticalize the tortured issue of the internal security, and, judging from the reaction to Monday's editorial, a great many Americans agree.

Defense Of Washington

Sometimes it has been observed that Washington is the last place the Russians would bomb in any war because that might end the confusion here. This is not an altogether reliable assumption, however, and we are glad that the District government and the National Security Resources Board are getting together on an interim civil defense plan. Such action means that with the revival of the NSRB civil defense is at last getting under way generally. It is said that the Washington plan will serve as a model for the rest of the Nation—an indication that civil defense preparations elsewhere must be practically nonexistent.

Such planning does not call for a fire warden on every housetop, dancers for morale, or Major Barrett's ambitious scheme for a police reserve. Frills and ostentation must be shunned. What is needed is sober blueprinting of how Washington could help itself by using the facilities available to it in the event of attack—how it would mobilize police, fire, utility and medical services and the like. In this respect the doctors have shown themselves anxious to cooperate and far more ready than the District Commissioners.

Sound planning requires avoidance of the sort of flamboyance that would merely scare people. However, the training of potential cadres is a serious business, with the degree of training depending on intelligence guidance from the NSRB.

Korean Prospect

Warnings from Secretary Acheson and ECA Administrator Hoffman about the galloping inflation in Korea seem to have brought some improvement. We say "seem," because in so flimsy an economy temporary stability may be illusory. Nevertheless, the amount of currency in circulation has been reduced through a new monetary control board and bank reform law. Taxes have been stiffened. Prices show signs of leveling off as production rises, and the black market rate on American currency has fallen substantially. On paper, at least, the 1951 budget has been balanced—though the ability of the government to keep it that way is still a moot question.

If these advances are attributable to the tougher American policy of laying the cards on the table, there is no reason to relax that policy. The morass in Korea has several causes—the political division of the country, the fact that the Japanese occupation stripped Korea of administrative talent, the poor tutelage under military government. But at least part of the trouble has stemmed from the conviction on the part of some Korean officials that anticommunism alone was the key to the American purse. The House has now passed a deficiency appropriation of 50 million dollars for 1950 economic aid, and 100 million dollars more has been authorized for 1951. It is more than ever important that the Koreans be given to understand that the granting of this aid is conditioned not on mere anticommunist pronouncements, but on continued measures to put their own house in order.

Another apparent result of the American warning is that elections for the National Assembly will be held next Tuesday instead of being postponed as President Rhee had proposed. Here again, however, the appearance may be illusory, for the Rhee regime has engaged in violent political persecution, topped off with arrests, all in the name of anticommunism. Moreover, the Rhee faction is playing both ends against the middle; in many cases there are several Rhee candidates for a single seat. Furthermore, the United Nations observer teams are inadequate to determine whether the elections are fair.

The real danger here is that the squeezing out of liberal elements may alienate popular sympathy. The puppet Communist regime in North Korea, which seems to be Moscow-maintained as something of a show window, is always ready to take over. This is the gravest challenge to American administrators—to insist on political as well as economic measures to insure that American aid will actually contribute toward an independent Korea. The moral commitment to Korea is fast running out, as the House has recognized, and, strategically, Korea is another Bataan. The only justification for continued aid is results, and here the greatest realism is necessary in assessing the American interest.

Matthews' Year

House passage of the 350-million-dollar naval construction bill came as a fitting anniversary gift for Secretary Matthews. It is also indicative of new confidence in the Navy. Mr. Matthews was confirmed as Secretary one year ago today, following the upheaval that led to the resignation of John L. Sullivan. It has been a turbulent year, in which both Mr. Matthews and the Navy have incurred some scars. The important thing—and this is a testimonial to the calm persistence of the landlubber lawyer from Nebraska—is that the Navy not only has recovered from its wounds, but has been gaining stature as an essential member of the defense team.

Perhaps the most significant factor in this recovery is the presence of Admiral Forrest Sherman as Chief of Naval Operations. He was Mr. Matthews' personal choice, on the advice of Admiral Nimitz. He took over in the most difficult circumstances, just after Admiral Denfeld had been fired as a result of the disgraceful brawl that led to an investigation on Capitol Hill. The Navy was by no means wholly at fault in the charges made, but its tactics were vicious. Admiral Sherman's troubles were increased by the suspicion of him within the Navy. It is a tribute to his patience, firmness and tact that the suspicion has changed to admiration.

Admiral Sherman's course has not been to accept a second-class role for the Navy, but to eschew attacks on the Air Force and to emphasize the all-important Navy job of antisubmarine warfare. This emphasis has been both necessary and popular, and it has paid off in the curtailment of cuts and in some added funds. Now it is even feasible for naval officers to mention the possibility of a large aircraft carrier without inviting charges that the Navy is trying to muscle in on the Air Force domain of strategic bombing.

Naval aviation is not what it might be, and there are other weak spots in the Navy, but Admiral Sherman, under Mr. Matthews' leadership, is a salesman of growing ability. The reason is that he is not a bell-bottomed advocate of a lone-wolf role for the Navy. He has shown that he can work with the other services; indeed, he is respected as the best geopolitician on the Joint Chiefs of Staff. There are lessons that all the services can learn from the Navy's resurgence, and we congratulate Secretary Matthews and Admiral Sherman on their success in guiding the Navy back on the beam.

Bicentennial

Invitations have gone out to 750 universities, libraries and museums in 58 countries to join with Columbia University in the celebration of its 200th anniversary in 1954. The theme of the celebration as defined by President Eisenhower is to be "the belief that, through the free and just use of all the knowledge he can acquire, man may triumphantly insure the peace and progress for which he strives." This is the theme to which institutions of higher learning everywhere have been traditionally dedicated.

Unhappily, as President Eisenhower noted, "the ideal of full freedom of scholarly inquiry and expression . . . is now being subjected to serious and systematic attack in many lands." It is as a reaffirmation of faith in this ideal that he has asked institutions elsewhere to join Columbia. His invitation has gone to institutions in Russia and other countries where academic freedom is now all but extinguished by political control, as well as to institutions in countries where the never-ending attack upon it is still successfully resisted.

It seems to us entirely fitting that his invitation should have been universal. For the ancient and honorable universities to which it was addressed have an existence and a meaning that transcends the transient distortions forced upon them by passing political regimes. The fellowship of learning knows no national frontiers. The hand of Columbia University extended in this fellowship may bring hope even where it cannot be grasped.

"Where There's So Much Smoke There Must Be Fire"

Long-Range Job Shortage

By Malvina Lindsay

Alger Myth Challenge

MANY BOYS and girls coming out of college or even high school in June feel anxious about the world they are entering. There's the overhanging war threat . . . the warning this will be the toughest year since the end of the war for young job hunters . . . the more distant shadow of long-range unemployment.

True, employment prospects have improved sharply for 1950 and opportunities for youth will still be relatively high though applicants will have to work harder for them, bring more to them. But if chances get a little scarcer each year, owing to labor-saving machinery and growth of population, how is the young, eager, would-be worker to adapt to the growing job scramble? How are his parents and teachers to prepare him for it?

The best answer would be to mobilize brains to create opportunity. But however much or little is done along this line, the going is likely to be harder for many job seekers in the future.

Hence more should be done in the home, school and community to steer round pegs toward round holes. Hard-headed job choosing based on study of social and economic trends, also on natural aptitudes, will have to supersede the impulsive, sentimental approach to careers that so widely prevails. Much help already in that line is offered by Labor Department agencies and through vocational guidance, but a great deal more is needed.

YOUNG JOB seekers of tomorrow will need especially an intangible armor. There is a growing feeling among social scientists that this should consist of a set of values suited to a new economy. Something more dependable than the success story ideal is needed. At least the easy money, get rich quick, be-a-big-guy-in-short-order dream is not likely to work so well in future. But it has attained such a hold in our folklore that many Americans today feel cheated if it doesn't come true in their lives.

Warnings that many children are being given false ideas of life have come recently from two anthropologists, Dr. Clyde Kluckhohn of Harvard University and Dr. Margaret Mead, associate curator of the American Museum of Natural History.

Many parents, says Dr. Kluckhohn, continue their emphasis on the old material success ideal even though it is increasingly hard to achieve under "economic and political realities" of life today. He thinks this causes tension inside and outside the home and prepares many disillusioned people for the appeal of demagogues.

Dr. Mead thinks children get false notions of life through their parents' efforts to "box them off from reality and suffering." One reason for this, she believes, is the tendency in this country to overvalue youth. Hence, many children don't want to grow up, many adults wish they were children.

Anxious and overambitious parents also handicap children for the new rugged world ahead, psychologists point out. Since manifestly many young people cannot count on the material success, honor, prestige of which they and their parents dream, there is much disillusionment in store for those who expect too much through the easy way.

THIS IS NOT to discount the need for the ambition, initiative, self-confidence that will be needed to create opportunity in a stiffly competitive job world. But those millions of high school students who confidently state on questionnaires that they expect to be high-powered executives, or at least lawyers or engineers, should have interests, activities, sets of values to fall back on in event their dreams take a different turn.

Solid comfortable citizens often lament the yearning for security of present-day youth—blame it on bureaucratic and parental coddling. Yet—if indeed it is anything new—some of its genesis may be found in the success-based-on-money ideal. Material goods have long been held up as the only "security." Hence youth plans toward such a buttress. Too often it has no other security—no faith, philosophy, inner vein of iron on which to depend.

Barring war, the job market is likely to be increasingly a place for strong, flexible, inventive, persevering competitors. Even the Horatio Alger formula of working hard and being bright, honest and courteous will not guarantee success. Nor will skill and training alone. Definite handicaps will be false ideas of life, superficial values and lack of preparation for reality.

French Olive Branch

Posterity will probably acknowledge M. Schuman as the wise statesman who laid the foundations of enduring friendship between two hitherto irreconcilable enemies.

It is now pertinent to disclose that in 1921 a committee of the French Chamber of Deputies, in a secret meeting, discussed whether it would be in the interest of France to bring about a customs union with Germany. The committee concluded that such a union would greatly benefit the French people.

Nobody denied that certain French industries—say the optical industry—and certain German industries—say the silk industry—would suffer; but, in both countries other industries and agriculture would flourish. However, the committee expressed its opinion that the bad political relations then prevailing between France and Germany would have prevented the free exchange of redundant industrial workers and specialists, upon which the success of the scheme depended. Moreover, there was every indication that Great Britain would, at that time, have vetoed the scheme, which was consequently dropped.

For those who are rightly convinced that, in the long run, the only choice lies between free trade and communism, the plan now put forward by M. Schuman gives rise to grave apprehensions. What is the real meaning of the economic union of French and German resources in coal and steel under a common authority? Does it mean free and competitive private trade between the two countries? Or does it mean the nucleus of a vast state-trading organization that will ultimately lead to a communist economy?

It is readily admitted that it is very difficult, if not impossible, to deal freely in two commodities, however important they may be, if the whole economy is not freed from control. Why then confine the scheme to coal and steel? Why not set up a free-trading Franco-German customs union, with gradually diminishing barriers, for all commodities? And why not adopt a common currency as well superseding both the franc and the mark? PAUL de HEVESY.
London.

Page Dr. Kinsey

An item in your issue of May 19 states that prototypes of the Kinsey report fare badly in Finland. Two Finnish doctors left Helsinki in a hurry when angry parents cut short their questioning of college students. Hurrah for the Finnish parents.

Kinsey reports are supposed to be based on the questioning of normal males and females. How can Dr. Kinsey be sure that the persons he questions are normal? How can he be sure that he himself is normal? And this takes us back to the moot question of what is normal.

The margin of error in such reports is tremendous. The validity of Kinsey reports is predicated upon the fact that persons answering are telling the truth and that they understand themselves so well that they know what the truth is. In my opinion, persons of any delicacy of feeling are not going to tell investigators about their emotions. Some who answered would minimize the facts. Others of an exhibitionist turn of mind would exaggerate their feelings and experiences. Many would invent data out of pure devilment.

The only sex reactions which Dr. Kinsey knows about are his own and the same goes for his investigators. I am 100 percent with the parents of Helsinki.

LAURA K. POLLOCK.
Washington.

Listless Washington

Mr. Carter T. Barron certainly speaks the truth about the Sesquicentennial. And now the Sesqui is a dud as was anticipated—gone with the national stadium and downtown garage, planned on paper, to help solve parking and traffic conditions.

Folks visiting me from Cleveland, Chicago, New York and other cities make me feel ashamed to admit that I am a native Washingtonian, although I have been naturalized since 1909. Cities I have visited and attended conventions in have certainly made me feel lack of community spirit in the Federal City, necessary to create large projects—especially among the business leaders, whose wealth has been amassed from money spent by Government employes.

Washington will have nothing of a progressive nature until the good old Federal Treasury puts in the chips, and engineers the project—that is, unless Uncle Sam guarantees the profits. Even Congress doesn't give a "hang" about the Federal City, as evidenced by the miserly appropriations for maintenance of the Capital of the greatest country on earth. W. B. CHAMPION.
Alexandria.

Woodley As A School

The opposition to the use of Woodley as a school organized. Those who favored such use did not, but I hope it is not too late to express our views.

I have owned a home near Woodley for several years and consider Woodley such an eyesore and architectural monstrosity that any change would be for the better. Furthermore, I hear similar convictions expressed generally by my neighbors. The place was built in an era of architectural errors.

A well-run private school is an asset to a neighborhood. My home is also near the Cathedral School, where the grounds are beautifully kept, and the children cause no annoyance.

More private schools are desperately needed in the District of Columbia. Existing schools all have long waiting lists, and statistics indicate that by 1956 there will be several thousand more children of school age than there is space to accommodate in present facilities.

More museums are not needed in this locality. The trend to look to the past rather than to the future is deplorable. To what more constructive use could Woodley be put, than to function as a well-run school?

ELISABETH McSHERRY.
Washington.

If Government employes are not allowed to accumulate annual leave, will we be given some other type of unemployment insurance?

"War Or Peace"

Mr. John Foster Dulles has written a very important book. War Or Peace presents in concentrated form the results of concentrated thinking. Also it presents a sincere balance of the world conditions today. Why is it that, nevertheless, the proposals based on his penetrating insight are not more satisfying?

Mr. Dulles states that there has been a very definite shift in the balance of power in the world in favor of the Soviets. But his prescriptions are not very different from the policy which led to this result. I submit that the explanation of this inconsistency lies in the fact that the only valid alternative to our present foreign policy is one directed toward world government, and that Mr. Dulles thinks such a course to be impossible.

As John Foster Dulles can be considered as representative for the basic thoughts prevalent in the official family, his book gives an opportunity to examine the reasons why our State Department keeps aloof from the idea of world government.

Mr. Dulles comes, in theory, very near to it. He says, for instance: "A peaceful world is a world in which differences are tolerated, and not eliminated by violence." "Under modern conditions there can never be a successful 'war to end war'." He begins a sentence by stating, "Fundamentally, world peace depends on world law . . . " One would expect him to continue that we must, for this reason, try by all means to attain world law and world government.

Actually—and here his thinking reaches the critical point—he goes on to say, . . . "and world law depends upon a consensus of world opinion as to what is right and what is just." Do all our laws depend upon a more detailed consensus of opinion than there exists all around the world with respect to peace? Was there such consensus when the United States was conceived?

Mr. Dulles himself states that experience in the United Nations "shows that there is considerable agreement about what is right." It seems that he does not include the Russians here. For he continues by saying: "The great difficulty today is that the Communist rulers, who control so much of the world, are animated by an atheistic creed which denies the existence of a moral law or natural law. "From some declarations by Secretary Acheson a similar reasoning can be inferred.

This writer disapproves as much as anyone else the Soviets' policy since 1945. But he thinks it is a mistake to ascribe them to atheism or amoralism, or to assume any constant reason for them. Every nation has had in the course of its history periods of better and of worse political and moral behavior. One should not forget that the Soviets were the most sincere adherents to the principle of collective security under the League of Nations.

As to the years between the great wars, Sumner Welles states that the Soviet government "had gained a deserved reputation for complying with the international agreements she contracted." On the other hand, Prime Minister Chamberlain was a pious man, yet Munich was not only politically but also morally wrong. Nations and their governments cannot be divided into saints and sinners.

In addition, government does not assume a society of just and moral people. On the contrary, it has been instituted because there are unjust and immoral men. The first purpose of all governments is to protect the peaceful against aggression.

Mr. Dulles remarks: "There is no use having more and louder Voices of America unless we have something to say that is more persuasive than anything yet said." The message of organized enduring peace is this something. It is time that the shapers of our foreign policy free themselves from their prejudices against world government and resort to the only course which promises at once preponderance over the hollow Soviet peace propaganda and eventually real peace.

"Prisoner Slaves"

Your May 20 editorial, "Prisoner Slaves," leaves me without sorrow or tears, however sad the condition of German prisoners in Russia may be. Frankly, I feel this way because to feel any pangs of sorrow for countries whose people are noted for their butchery, mass murders, origination of the gas chambers and other horrible crimes against civilization is without precedent and without justice.

I and many others can never forget the inhumanity of the Germans and the Japanese, and it will certainly take a long time of repentance and action of good will on the part of the Germans and Japanese for me to shed any tears for them.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Three Pictures Of Germany

THIS WEEK there have been three allied actions—all of them in Germany and each in its own way touching a great issue of Germany policy.

Lippmann

FIRST. Mr. McCloy made a speech at Hanover which, as reported in the American papers, told the Germans that we intend to occupy Germany for a long time, and that while we are there we mean to see to it that they create a "peaceful and democratic society." As an illustration Mr. McCloy gave our idea of what the German civil service law ought to be like.

Here we see ourselves engaged in reforming and remaking Germany in order to unite her eventually with the Western nations.

SECOND. The three Western powers addressed similar but not identic notes to the Soviet government protesting about the formation of the east German police which is, as compared with any force in western Germany, an army. The American protest (the text of the British and French notes are not available as this is written) is based on the Yalta and Potsdam agreements. Here we see Germany pictured as the common enemy of the united forces of Britain, France, Russia and America.

Germany is to be permanently demilitarized under the control of the four occupying powers. On the basis of the Yalta and Potsdam texts our note asks the Soviet government to "dissolve immediately the militarized units which it has set up in Eastern Germany."

Anyone reading our note, who did not know what has happened since Yalta and Potsdam, would think we wanted to take Germany back to the place assigned to her at Yalta, when Hitler was still alive, and at Potsdam, when, with Roosevelt dead and Churchill defeated, there was no one from the West who had authority and also knew what it was all about.

As a matter of fact we do not wish and do not now mean to go back to the Yalta-Potsdam Germany. Therefore, it would have been better to ask the Russians whether their approval of the east German police means that they regard Yalta and Potsdam as obsolete, and then to say that if they do, we shall now feel free to authorize a western police force . . . this western police force would, of course, be larger than the eastern police since west Germany is much larger than east Germany . . . if the Russians wished to discuss the regulation of the two forces, we would be prepared to discuss it with them.

THIRD. We see M. Jean Monnet, representing the French government, opening negotiations in Bonn with Dr. Adenauer for an economic partnership based on full legal and political equality between France and Germany. This is not the Germany the Allies were talking about at Yalta and at Potsdam nor is it the Germany of Mr. McCloy's speech.

The Germans, as seen at Yalta, were inherently and, for all practical purposes, a permanently wicked nation, and so they had to be disarmed and policed by the victors for the whole foreseeable future.

The Germans of Mr. McCloy's Hanover speech are not inherently wicked and they are not imprisoned, as at Yalta. They are in a reform school which we conduct. But the Germans of the Schuman proposal are Europeans as are the French, and as Europeans they are equals, there are no victors and vanquished, their deepest interests are the same, and they must now walk together.

THE FACT that France and Germany are negotiating directly and as equals is a far more important development than the eventual terms of the coal and steel agreement. There are many other agreements to be made, once the channels of negotiation have been opened, and France and Germany have begun to acquire the habit of recognizing their common interests and their joint responsibilities inside Europe.

A FRANCO-GERMAN partnership is the crucial element in any European system. For what is "Europe," about which we talk so much, which we wish to see secure, liberated, reconstituted as a great force and influence in the world? Russia obviously is not Europe. America is obviously not Europe. And in all truth neither is Britain. The two leading European nations are France and Germany. If they cannot put an end to their wars and become partners and allies in the business of Europe, there will be no Europe.

If there is no Europe, there will be no European recovery. There will be no peace. The European continent, which was once the center of civilization, will lose its independence. Its nations will become the satellites or the clients of the non-European powers. And at the worst its cities and its lands will be the battlefield where nothing can be decided certainly except that European civilization will be ruined.

Bradley's Burdens

By Marquis Childs

Supremacy Of Civil Authority

A QUAINT American custom is to overload to the point of exhaustion a good man willing to take public responsibility. The more he takes on, the heavier are the burdens heaped on his back.

Childs

Few men have emerged in the postwar era with such stature as Gen. Omar N. Bradley. He has shown maturity and breadth of vision through all the difficult period following General Eisenhower's brief tour of duty as Chief of Staff. Only once during the long quarrel over unification did he let loose with a blast, and then, it must be said, the provocation was great.

In August of 1949 Bradley was made the first chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. From that moment on he has had one task after another piled on his shoulders. Far from complaining, he has taken it like the soldier that he is. But there is a limit to human endurance and human capacity.

As chairman of the Defense Committee on the Atlantic Pact, Bradley has had to carry the major share of the job of shaping up a defense policy acceptable to the European nations and to the United States. That meant long and arduous sessions at The Hague in Holland with military representatives of the other pact nations. It meant trying to find the hard core of what was practical and real in a vast mass of plans and proposals coming out of the hopes and aspirations of 12 nations.

IN ADDITION, Bradley has felt a responsibility to inform the American public on the meaning of the new effort to shape a common defense force with the other Atlantic nations. He was the first to suggest that this country might have to sacrifice some part of its military establishment in order to carry out the specialization that would assure all countries the greatest measure of security.

He has just returned from a visit to the West Coast that meant two or three speeches as well as military conferences. Throughout his Armed Forces Day address in San Francisco ran a note of warning that perhaps this country should be doing far more than it is doing if "peace through containment by strength" is to be achieved. General Bradley said:

"We can lose this half-war by half-measures, but semisupport is not the American way of doing things. We can implement this program with increased production, conduct it with total diplomacy and back it up with adequate armed forces. In this way our defense plans can be part of our strategy for a lasting peace . . ."

It must be remembered in this connection that Bradley does not make policy. He is deeply conscious of the American system which, under both law and tradition, puts the President as Commander in Chief, together with civilian Cabinet officers, over the men in uniform.

SOME military men have taken this cynically or resentfully and some have made a mockery of it. But Bradley's acceptance of it is part of his profound conviction of the American way of life. The note of warning in his San Francisco speech might reflect his own belief that present defense planning is too little if not also too late. Yet, he would construe it as his duty to carry out policy as defined by civilian authority; perhaps at the same time trying to make clear his own reservations and doubts.

One handicap Bradley has faced since becoming chairman of the Joint Chiefs and that is that he no longer has the resources of a great organization at his command. He must depend on a small staff and when this is inadequate he must farm out problems to be solved.

Shortly Bradley and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson will leave for Japan. The announced purpose of their trip is to inspect occupation forces and to confer with Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

This could involve Bradley in what is perhaps the sharpest of the many differences between the Defense and State Departments over major policy decisions. Defense officials are fearful that any change in the present situation will result in a decline in American strength in the face of the threat of war. The viewpoint is growing in the State Department that this is a kind of vicious dead center which almost invites war.

One can only respect Bradley for his deep conviction of the importance of subordinating the military to civilian control. But it is also true that his knowledge and experience are of an order equaled by few men whether in or out of uniform. Opinion in this country can profit by this knowledge and experience and particularly if it is not subordinated to the interests of any personal partisanship or special pleading.

Strike Shuts 'Hill' UP Wires

The Washington City News Service teletype machine in the Senate wing of the Capitol has been turned off because of the strike of AFL telegraphers against United Press, which operates the WCNS ticker.

Joseph C. Duke, Senate sergeant at arms, said yesterday that he had shut off the news-receiving machine on Monday at the request of the Commercial Telegraphers Union on strike against UP for higher wages since May 1.

Locally, 21 striking telegraphers briefly picketed two UP clients, American Trucking Association and U. S. News. In New York, Federal mediators renewed efforts to end the dispute.

11 Graduated By Seminary Of Adventists

Graduates of the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary in Takoma Park last night were warned against letting their higher education cause them to "loose touch with the comman man."

The warning was sounded by Elder J. LaMarr McElhany, president of the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists. He spoke at ceremonies at which 11 students received Master of Arts degrees.

Degrees were conferred by Elder Denton E. Rebok, president of the seminary.

Elder McElhany asserted that the "world is perishing for the lack of preaching and practice of Gospel principles." He urged the graduates to "fill that need with aggressive evangelism."

Celebrities Bill Adds Danny Kaye

By Richard L. Coe

DANNY KAYE has added his name to the Celebrities Golf Tournament weekend after next, which means he'll be on the stage bill Saturday night, June 3, at the Armory with Bob Hope and Arthur Godfrey.

That's a trio you can't beat.

The incomparable Kaye promises, among other things, to give you some takeoffs on politicians and his ideas about the funny sides of golf.

He's played Washington, since his rise, only at private parties, but this time he's frankly glad you won't have to have an engraved invitation or a duck suit to see him.

While Danny certainly can't be said to have a limited audience in his homeland, he's a comedian with unparalleled popularity abroad. There's something immensely civilized about his zany humor which has more world-wide appeal than either Hope of the wisecracks or Godfrey of the folksy observations.

His annual visits to the London Palladium, for instance, have raised him, in Britain, to ambassadorial rank which lacks only Mr. Douglas' official credentials. The Palladium sells out months in advance of his visit, the galleryites sit for hours in the rain to be the first to break into the unreserved sections and he's been known to keep the show running an hour overtime. I've seen Arabs, French, Italians and Greeks holding their sides as they watched Danny combat the more wilful obstructions of civilization.

What will make the Armory show especially lively will be the friendly duel for laughs on the part of these two top masters. Fundamentally, their styles are totally distinct, but at the Armory June 3 they'll be working for two identical aims: charity and laughter.

RAIN DOGGED the opening of American University's open air production of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," but one still had time to relish the lovely setting arranged by Dr. Severino Montano . . . Martin Ries designed the scenery of Windsor houses against a charming background of trees, with the audience seated on a small hillside on the edge of the campus . . . Dramatically, one was baffled by the diversity of accents employed by the cast; cockney, French and some particularly strong touches of S. Z. Sakall and Jack Pearl's Baron Munchausen seemed needless embroidery for Shakespearean comedy, difficult at best . . . The offering will be repeated in the campus grotto through Saturday evening.

GLEN ECHO opens its triple-layer swimming hole this morning at 10, with subaqueous illumination (wow!) making it possible to keep going till 10:30 nightly . . . With a 12-foot diving pool and a kiddies' wading spot, this is the triple-depth pool's nineteenth season.

PHIL HANNA, "Brigadoon's" leading man—and the best of the several I've seen in the part—startled some folks in Manchester, England, when his company was trying out a year ago for their London smash . . . He phoned an athletic club, asked if someone would give him a tennis game . . . "I'm pretty good, so try to find someone who'll give me a good game," the singer told the reticient British . . . Everybody understood when, at Wimbledon a few months later, Phil reached the quarter-finals . . . "He was so right," a Britisher told me. He scraped his hand on the Act II bar carelessly left near one of his exits opening night here but, glimpsed at the Raleigh yesterday, Phil looked as though he could still handle a racket . . . As well as those lovely songs in the Gayety's musical.

THE PALACE has a sneak preview skedded for tonight at 8:30 between the evening's final showings of "Capt. Carey, U. S. A." . . . Can't tell much about the picture except that its young director is one of the best.

ERIC JOHNSTON'S elegant Academia Theater, in his office at 16th and I, will be host tomorrow night to an unusual audience, information officials of our embassies and ministries abroad now on t. dy. in this country . . . From all the continents, this unique group will watch a typically American comedy, "The Father of the Bride." . . . The Johnston Office couldn't have made a better choice of picture.

SPRUCING up for its opening Memorial Day evening is the 400-seat Collingwood Theater-on-the-Potomac, part of that restaurant on the road between Alexandria and Mount Vernon . . . The resident company, directed by Steffen Zacharias, will have a guest star for the opening play, Gloria Jean, who's grown into quite an eye-filler since "If I Had My Way" with Bing Crosby not so many years ago . . . The play is Preston Sturges' comedy, "Strictly Dishonorable."

THE FALLS CHURCH Community Theater tonight presents its final offering of the season, to be repeated through Saturday evening at Madison School . . . "Heaven Can Wait," which the movies knew as "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," is the play, which has been directed by Ollie Smith, with Michael O'Brien, David Thomas, Reginald Field, Margaret Pittman, Shandy Holland and Lew Danforth.

LANDON SCHOOL'S Dramatic Club will act Austin Strong's "Three Wise Fools" in the school auditorium tomorrow and Saturday nights . . . J. Govans Smith, head of the English department, is directing, with Alan Engelsman, Ellis Weems and Ben Hoffman as the three bachelors . . . Completing the cast are Roland Davis, Cary Allen, Robert Norris, Stanley Nolan, Theodore Bledsoe, Jack Mudgett, Robert Johnson, Rick Fayen, Richard Beers and Paul Neal.

Festival of Song by Agriculture's Voices

By Paul Hume

Things really warmed up at the Department of Agriculture last night.

Jefferson Auditorium was hot to start with, and by the time the department choristers had sung their second annual concert, it was degrees warmer. The chorus followed the same pattern.

The only difference is that they were not so hot at the beginning, but by the end of the evening, they were close to torrid too. Being specific, the last piece on the program was the best singing they did, the preceding best was next best, and so on.

Directed by Richard Dirksen, with Edwin Davis playing the solo piano, the closing music was Constant Lambert's Rio Grande. In it, the chorus found almost new voices. They sang with vigor, precision, excellent diction, and a sense of choral tone that was a pleasure.

Their feet never slipped in the tricky measures, and the piece came off with a bang. Much of this was due to Davis in the solo lines. The piano has a tremendous job in the Rio Grande, and, with Ronald Arnatt playing the orchestra part on the second piano, it all sounded properly exciting.

Davis earlier played a prelude of Ravel, and five by Chopin. He gave an accurate account of Ravel's Barque sur l'ocean, and in all that he did, made the most of the inadequate instrument at his disposal.

Returning to the next to the last piece of the chorus, it was the rhythmically involved round from Peter Grimes "Old Joe has gone fishing." Here too the chorus won real applause for the concise way they handled the tough assignment. Earlier they lacked tone, intonation, and style to merit great praise.

Winifred Waldo, soprano, sang four songs in the first half of the evening that showed her clear lyric voice off to good advantage. She has style, good control and natural diction. A bit more support would add to her slender volume.

Lehigh U. President Speaks Here Tonight

Dr. Martin D. Whitaker, president of Lehigh University, will be the guest of honor and principal speaker at a dinner meeting of the Washington Lehigh Club at 7 p. m. tonight in the Louis Seize Room, Shoreham Hotel. A social hour beginning at 6 p. m. will precede the dinner.

Dr. Whitaker will bring Washington alumni a report on university affairs and Edward A. Curtis, president of the Lehigh Alumni Association, will report on alumni activities.

Tiger Kills WHO Worker

Lake Success, May 24 (AP).—Word reached here today that a temporary employe of the World Health Organization (WHO) was killed by a man-eating tiger recently in northeastern India. The man worked for a WHO team engaged in antimalaria work.

Double Bill

'Met' Vaults From Jungle To Diamond

THE double feature, an off-again, on-again gambit, sometimes despised, sometimes blest, seems to be going through an on-again cycle at the Metropolitan.

Yesterday brought William Bendix in "Kill the Umpire" and Johnny Weissmuller in "Mark of the Gorilla." Stars and titles describe the bill adequately.

The Bendix comedy, with Una Merkel, Ray Collins and Gloria Henry in the other leads, is about a former player, now just a fan, who keeps losing jobs because he goes to too many games on company time. He's got to choose between his family and his fun, which winds him up umpiring. He goes through Florida training at the umpire school and winds up with the fans missing tar and feathers.

Weissmuller's Jungle Jim series moves along another notch in "Mark of the Gorilla," which finds Jim-Johnny after a fortune of gold bullion the Nazis are supposed to have hidden somewhere in his jungle game preserve. Rascally Onslow Stevens poses as a doctor and tries to pull a fast one with a gorilla disguise. And as J. J., Weissmuller gets his chance to rescue Heroine Trudy Marshall from drowning. R. L. C.

"KILL THE UMPIRE," Columbia release produced by John Beck. Screen play by Frank Tashin. Photographed by Charles Lawton. Music by Morris Stoloff. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. At the Metropolitan.

5-Day Picket Begins for FEPC

Members of the Progressive Party began picketing the White House yesterday, urging enactment of Fair Employment Practices legislation.

A spokesman for the party of Henry A. Wallace said the pickets would walk from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m., five days a week, until the Senate acts on the FEPC bill, which was delayed again yesterday.

George B. Murphy, jr., assistant to the party's national secretary, said they felt President Truman's support of FEPC had been "purely lip service."

The marchers carried signs reading, "Join Our People's Vigil for FEPC," and "No Compromise with White Supremacy—Pass FEPC."

Progressive Party members said Paul Robeson, Negro singer; Elmer Benson, former Governor of Minnesota, and C. B. Baldwin, national secretary of the party, will take part in the marathon demonstration.

Rich Uranium Source Reported

Pretoria, South Africa, May 24 (AP).—The Union of South Africa has launched a hush-hush uranium production project which Government leaders believe will help the West maintain world atomic supremacy.

Qualified informants connected with the project disclosed today that a number of pilot plants have swung into production at key points along the rich Witwaters Rand gold reef. The plants are extracting uranium from gold ore which seems to be in almost limitless supply here.

The informants expressed the view that if the Witwaters Rand project fulfills expectations this country likely will become the most important source of uranium in quantity in the world.

Boy, 4, Dies in Dad's Arms As He Is Carried to Hospital

The 4-year-old son of a Defense Department official died early yesterday as his father carried him into Children's Hospital.

He was Charles "Greg" Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Phillips, 5313 Augusta st., Glen Mar Park, Md.

Phillips said: "Greg was not feeling up to par Tuesday. He had a slight swelling on one side of his throat. We thought it was mumps." He stayed in bed but grew worse during the night. The doctor was called and advised that the boy be taken to the hospital.

At 2:30 a. m. yesterday, according to the father, "Greg died in my arms on the steps of the hospital. He just seemed to give up." Cause of death was given as telectasis (collapse of lungs), following a bronchial condition.

Phillips is assistant director of the Office of Accounting Policy in the office of the Secretary of Defense. The family came here in 1939.

In addition to his parents, Greg is survived by two sisters, Helen Ann, 6, and Constance Lynn, 1.

Mass will be said in the Roman Catholic Church of the Little Flower, Glen Echo, Md., Friday, at 10:30 a. m. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Turkey's New President May Seek Loan in U. S.

Ankara, May 24 (AP).—Turkey's new president, Celal Bayar, may visit the United States soon to seek a loan to cover the heavy deficit in the nation's budget, it was reported tonight.

Bayar was not available for comment.

Informants said such a trip was being considered. They explained that Turkey would like to borrow money to expand economic and social development and also wants more Marshall Plan aid than she is getting now.

States Righter Loses in Florida Runoff for House

Tampa, Fla., May 24 (AP)—Florida's First Congressional District will send Chester B. McMullen, a middle-of-the-roader, to Washington in preference to fiery Tom Watson, outspoken champion of States' rights.

McMullen, State attorney from Clearwater, made a walkaway of what was expected to be a close Democratic runoff primary yesterday. With returns in from all except seven of the district's 335 precincts he led the Tampan 55,558 votes to 37,924 for the post being vacated by the veteran Representative J. Hardin Peterson of Lakeland.

Jury Holds Driver in Traffic Death

A coroner's jury yesterday held 24-year-old William H. Shipp of Sargent rd., Hyattsville, in connection with the traffic death of Robert Halstead.

At the time of the accident, Shipp was charged with failure to give full time and attention to driving. He was ordered held yesterday for Municipal Court under the Negligent Homicide Act.

According to testimony, Mr. Halstead, 23, a fireman at the Glenn Dale Sanatorium, was crossing the 3400 block of Eastern ave. at 1:20 a. m. April 30 when he was struck by Shipp's car.

Also injured was Miss Maxine Randolph, 19, of North Beach, Md. Both were taken to Casualty Hospital, where Halstead died May 1.

Ohio Farmers Bring Brannan Fight Here

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Nation-wide, no-holds-barred fight between Allan B. Kline, American Farm Bureau Federation head, and Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan over the Brannan Plan came to Washington yesterday.

It was brought by 50 Ohio Farm Bureau members. They also brought early returns of a poll the Ohio bureau is conducting to learn what Ohio farmers want from Congress. This poll, to date, shows:

1. Against all Government price supports: 36 percent.

2. In favor of the present system of price supports only: 17 percent.

3. For a combination of price supports for storables and reduction payments for perishables, urged by Brannan: 39 percent.

4. For production payments for both perishables and nonperishables: 8 percent.

In a day filled with meetings beginning at 7 o'clock, the visitors heard:

1. Secretary Roger Fleming of AFBF, speaking for Kline, virtually indorse the Brannan proposal for production payments for perishable commodities. That was in the AFBF-approved Aiken Law of 1948 that was replaced by the Anderson Agricultural Act of 1949, he said. The biggest fault with the Brannan Plan, he declared, is its high level of price supports for farm products. It would encourage over-production, he added.

2. Brannan compare the AFBF unfavorably with the labor organization that got employes of General Motors a high-pay, liberal-pension contract Tuesday. He directly charged Kline with misrepresenting his farm plan.

3. Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) declare there will be "no basic farm legislation at this session" because of "bi-partisan cooperation against the Department of Agriculture." Taft advised visitors not to seek any until "next January or February, no matter who wins" because, he said, "there's a little touch of politics this year."

4. Senator George D. Aiken, ranking Republican on the Senate Agriculture Committee, declare the "biggest farm problem we have now" to be "the bitter feeling between Congress and the Department of Agriculture." This feeling, he said, defeated the bill to reorganize the Department. "Congress is very set against giving more control over agriculture to one man or group of men," he said. Aiken said this feeling might lead to setting up an advisory board to take policy-making away from the Secretary. "I would hate to see a board take over control," he said, "But we may do it."

Aiken said Congress feared Brannan would have reduced the Extension Service if the reorganization bill had passed. "Congress," he said, "is very resentful toward the department. There is something sacred about agriculture. They want to get it out of politics. That is one reason there has been no agricultural legislation or hearings this year, or will be until after election."

The Ohio group visited the the White House to present President Truman a commendation for his support of farmer cooperatives "against unfriendly legislation." The presentation was made by John W. Sims, executive secretary of the Ohio bureau.

Fleming charged that Brannan was opposed to a trial run of the Brannan Plan for potatoes, when it was recently suggested. He said potatoes would have cost the Government 277 million dollars this year under the Brannan Plan. He declared AFBF had sought strict acreage reductions and marketing quotas for potatoes for years.

Brannan apparently referred to Fleming's remarks about production payments when he told the visitors at his office:

"I took a great deal of abuse because of production payments. Now your national leadership praises them. Another farm organization moved over in that direction beginning with its last national convention" (which hearers took to mean the National Grange.)

"This thing in controversy, this so-called Brannan Plan," he said, "was developed at the invitation of Congress. We didn't name it the Brannan Plan. The leaders of your national organization named it and then started attacking the author."

Big Cleanup Job Looming At Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Manitoba, May 24 (U.P.) This city's 35-day struggle against the flooded Red River turned into a fight against disease today.

With the flood level down to 29.3 feet, one foot below the peak crest, the army began evacuating its flood troops and authorities turned to the gigantic task of cleaning up this prairie capital.

The cleanup campaign will be almost as difficult as the flood battle. At least 17 percent of this 60-square-mile city must be decontaminated and deodorized. More than 2000 homes have been flooded above the first story and thousands more have brownish stale water in basements.

K. G. McQuarrie, district sanitary inspector, said mud probably will pose a serious problem.

"When the water goes down so the people can't use boats, the mud will be too deep for walking and will seriously hamper cleanup operations."

Brig. R. E. A. Morton, flood commander, said that by the end of the week the number of servicemen fighting the flood waters would be cut from 5000 to 3000.

Your Key to True Bourbon Flavor...

Old Style Sour Mash

Sour Mash bourbon is not sour. OLD FITZGERALD genuine Sour Mash is a special type of Kentucky whiskey, made and aged naturally, without scientific pressure or haste. It is the most expensive whiskey to produce because it takes more grain to make, more time to age—but the ultimate product is unsurpassed in full body and satisfying flavor. Sour Mash bourbon made Kentucky bourbon famous.

A living immortal brings great music to Washington

WASHINGTON

The word "great" should be used sparingly. Yet critics and music lovers alike acknowledge that it may be applied to one man in music. This man has the understanding, the sensitivity, the deep devotion... and the enthusiasm necessary to bring before us great music in all its greatness. That man is Toscanini.

His performances shine with the splendor of a special excitement, an excitement which no one can fully explain but which is felt both by those who know much about music and by those who are newcomers.

Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony Orchestra are now engaged on a transcontinental tour which has been hailed throughout the nation as one of the most important musical events of the half-century. We are pleased, indeed, to be included among the twenty cities on the tour, many of which have never before been privileged to hear Toscanini conduct in person. To him and the NBC Symphony Orchestra, we extend our warmest greetings.

Maestro Toscanini has always been an active and outspoken champion of democracy. The present tour is the fulfillment of a wish that has long been close to his heart... a wish to see more of this democracy which has been his home for so many years. That is why he determined to make this tour ... sparing no effort to overcome its tremendous organizational difficulties.

Just thirty years ago, Arturo Toscanini brought the Orchestra of La Scala, Milan, to this country. Ten years ago he led the NBC Orchestra on a tour of South America with sensational success. Now, with his amazing vitality undiminished ... at the height of his artistic powers ... he undertakes the greatest tour of his career.

Each tour performance seems to surpass all the others. Each, like the concert in our city, has been a sellout. There can never be enough seats for all who want to hear Toscanini!

All of us feel a deep pride in having Toscanini here and say "welcome" with all our hearts.

Earl M'Grath Sees Three Rs Well Taught

Earl J. McGrath, United States Commissioner of Education said yesterday that teachers and laymen who claim there is a lack of "three Rs" education in elementary schools "aren't familiar with the facts."

Statistical data, he told the closing session of a three-day conference on leadership in elementary education, proves that schools are "doing a better job" than ever before in the fundamentals of education, such as reading, writing and arithmetic.

Besides, he insisted, they are improving their efficiency in teaching children "responsible citizenship and how to live together."

"It is not easy to measure some of these intangible learnings," McGrath said.

The conference, held at the U. S. Office of Education in the Federal Security Agency, 3rd and Independence ave. sw. was attended by 70 delegates representing 42 organizations interested in elementary education.

The theme was "Improving Schools Through Lay Participation."

Besides several general sessions, the conference had five group discussions about problems involving the layman's role in teaching young children.

The Arlington County School Board's program of promoting interest by citizens' groups in elementary instruction was cited as an outstanding illustration of cooperation between teachers and laymen.

Suter Asks Revision of Prayer Book

The Very Rev. John W. Suter, dean of the Washington Cathedral, has called for revision of the Episcopal Book of Common Prayer.

He wants the prayer book changed so "it speaks to the people in a language they can understand." The prayers, he said, should deal "with the things they read in the paper, instead of generalizations."

Dean Suter called for the changes Tuesday at the convention of the Episcopal diocese of Harrisburg, Pa. He previously had urged the revision at the 56th general convention of the Episcopal Church in San Francisco last September.

He suggested that prayers should be added to the prayer book for use in times of national elections, at the time of the death of a statesman, during strikes, disasters, epidemics, and for occasions in the life of the church such as vacancies in bishopric or rectorship.

Dean Suter is custodian of the Standard Book of Common Prayer, with which all published versions must conform. Changes in the book may be made only after approval by the bishops and clerical and lay delegates at the general convention.

McGrath's Son Gets His Stolen Bicycle Back

Twelve-year-old David J. McGrath, son of the United States Attorney General, thinks his pop's G-men are good, but these days he's most enthusiastic about the work of the Metropolitan police.

In fact, young McGrath thinks so highly of the force which recovered his stolen bicycle in less than 12 hours that he is planning to write a letter to Supt. Robert J. Barrett telling him how good he really thinks they are.

The bicycle was taken early Tuesday and located that evening by Detective William J. Sartain, of the bicycle squad, in an alley about four blocks from the McGrath home, 5100 39th st. nw.

Improvement of Apes by Human Means Again Urged by Physiologist

Charlottesville, Va., May 24 (AP).—A physiologist whose recent suggestion that apes be bred artificially by humans remained unruffled today in the face of heavy gusts of criticism.

"It's time to stop fooling around with fruit flies and start on the apes," said Dr. Sydney William Britton of the University of Virginia.

The scientist said he would like nothing better than to go to Africa or some other region congenial to man's biological cousins and to launch such a project.

He made the observation in an interview—the first since he mentioned the subject last month before a meeting of the National Academy of Sciences in Washington.

Reams of critical letters have come in Britton's mail snce the Washington meeting. There Britton dropped in a remark about prodding the apes out of the evolutionary rut by artificial cross breeding with humans. He added, though, that while it might be "a diverting utilitarian prospect, to do so might lead again to traffic in slavery."

"I realize now that slavery was the wrong word. Horses and dogs are not considered slaves. Nor would the product of an effort to save chimpanzees and gorillas from a biological blind alley be considered a slave."

The physiologist said he would be the first to agree that the possible up-breeding of apes would raise moral and ethical questions which would have to be faced.

But from the standpoint of cold scientific curiosity, he added, the cross breeding poses no scientific difficulty and therefore will be attempted if it already has not been.

Dividend Put On $1.20 Basis By State Loan

By S. Oliver Goodman

Directors of State Loan & Finance Corp. yesterday increased the quarterly dividend on the Class A and B common stocks to 30 cents a share from 25 cents.

Davis Weir, president of the small-loan firm whose headquarters are in Washington, said that the action "may be construed as placing the A and B stocks on a regular $1.20 annual dividend basis," as compared with the previous $1 rate.

Regular quarterly dividends of 37½ cents a share on both classes of preferred stock also were voted. All dividends are payable June 15 to stock of record June 1.

Directors of Julius Garfinckel & Co., Inc., Washington department store, yesterday declared regular quarterly dividends as follows: 37½ cents a share on common stock; 34⅜ cents a share on 5½ percent convertible preferred stock, and 28⅛ cents a share on the 4½ percent convertible stock. All dividends are payable June 30 to stock of record June 15.

GRADUATION: More than 40 Washington life insurance men who have successfully completed the Life Underwriters Training Council course will receive certificates at a luncheon Friday in the Burlington. ## General Mills Votes 50c Extra Dividend

New York, May 23 (AP).—General Mills, Inc., today declared an extra dividend of 50 cents on common stock, payable July 1 to stock of record June 9.

Last year a 25-cent extra was disbursed July 1. Today's action brings declarations for the fiscal year ending May 31 to $2.50 as compared with $2.25 in the previous fiscal year.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 24 (AP).—July soybeans raced away from the rest of the grain market today. Beans jumped 10 cents, the daily limit, closing at that price.

The rest of the market did some upward running itself. All corn contracts scored new seasonal highs. Wheat surged ahead 3 cents or more. Rye, oats and lard joined the general inflationary move.

Wheat closed 3 to 3½ higher, corn 1 to 2½ higher, oats 1 to 1¾ higher, rye 2¼-2½ higher, soybeans 5 to 10 cents higher and lard 10 to 15 cents a hundred pounds higher.

New York Cotton

New York, May 24 (AP).—Cotton futures were firm today as aggressive trade buying and commission house demand carried the market into new seasonal high ground. Gains extended to almost $1 a bale before prices receded partially on increased profit-taking and hedging. Final prices were 15 to 80 cents a bale higher.

World Bank Adds 6 Currencies for Loans

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development announced yesterday that six more countries have acted toward making their currencies available to the bank for its lending operations.

They are the Netherlands, Italy, Mexico, Honduras, El Salvador, and Paraguay.

It was explained that of the 20 percent of the Bank's paid-in capital, only 2 percent is in the form of gold or United States dollars and is immediately available for lending. The remaining 18 percent is paid to the Bank in the currencies of the various member countries and can be used for loans only with the consent of the particular nation whose currency is involved.

Prior to this time, other countries having given the Bank permission to use their currencies were:

The United States, Belgium, Denmark, Canada, the United Kingdom and France.

Study Mission Going to Peru

The World Bank yesterday announced it is sending a mission to Peru to study that county's economy.

Eugene R. Black, president of the Bank, said the mission was requested by the Peruvian government.

Black told a news conference it will be headed by S. W. Anderson and Dr. Harold Larsen, and will include about four or five members. The mission is scheduled to arrive in Peru in early July.

Later, Ambassador Fernando Berckemeyer of Peru said the mission will give special attention to irrigation, road building, industrial development and the building of new ports.

"The recent great accomplishments in our economic development and improvements will be easily verified, and I am certain that in our association with the World Bank, it will prove the fulfillment of the Peruvian government's program of economic development," the Ambassador said.

The mission will bring the Bank up to date with regard to the economic financial and business situation in Peru, and discuss with the Peruvian government the program of further economic development, the Bank said in an announcement.

The mission is now making preliminary studies of the Peruvian situation, Black said.

Barkley Sees Education as Aid to Peace

Vice President Alben W. Barkley closed the fifth annual National Conference on Citizenship yesterday with a ringing appeal to "elevate our own ideal" through better education and citizenship as the best hope of winning world peace.

Education and good citizenship are corelated in today's complex society of men, he told about 500 delegates in a crowded Statler Hotel ballroom. The five-day meeting, devoted to promoting more effective citizenship programs throughout the country, was sponsored by the Justice Department and the National Education Association.

"This country has long since abandoned the archaic theory that education is solely a family or private responsibility," he said.

The Government, he said, is "trying gradually" to bridge the gap between those who are citizens in a technical sense and those who are morally citizens but are denied active participation in Government.

Insisting the relationship between Government and citizenship is mutual in the United States, Barkley said:

"There are those who complain about 'big Government.' It is big, but we also have big business, big labor and big problems . . . and I doubt whether it will ever be much smaller."

Barkey served as honorary chairman of the citizenship conference which drew nearly 1000 delegates from all over the United States.

Earlier Justin Miller, chairman of the Attorney General's Committee on Citizenship, urged conference delegates to begin thinking in terms of establishing an "Institute of American Citizenship" with permanent headquarters in Washington.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

CLEVELAND, MAY 24.—I will stop writing pieces about Bucky Harris just as soon as he stops confounding the American League with his funny-looking Washington team of retreads, castoffs and converts that, along about this time, was supposed to be last place.

If you don't think Harris is news, you haven't been reading the flabbergasted reaction of baseball-writing press in Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis and now Cleveland where the Nats are winding up their Western trip. They're describing Harris as a composite of genius, magician and helluva guy.

POVICH

Harris, himself, isn't being beguiled by his clippings but he's pretty happy about the whole thing even to the point of displaying an exuberance he never owned before.

"I'm getting more of a belt out of managing this ball team than any of the four others I've managed in the majors," says Harris. "These kids of mine have had their noses rubbed in it for so long, it's wonderful to see' em up there in the first division."

THEIR PRESENCE in the first division is a staggering upset. A capsule description of Harris' team could be: Three established ball players, Ray Scarborough, Eddie Yost and Eddie Robinson; a humpty-dumpty pitching staff otherwise; a second baseman who played shortstop most of his life; a shortstop who never made good before, and an outfield that wasn't rated very good.

Yet there they are with more wins already under their belt than they could achieve throughout the last half of last season. Sid Hudson, who could win only eight games last season, already the winner of five. Lloyd Hittle, a five-game winner last year, already winning two. Chico Marrero, unheard-of last year, undefeated in two decisions. Steve Nagy, a two-time winner over the Yanks.

Harris has been taking the pressure off the whole club with his maneuvering. Eddie Robinson, who was benched by Joe Kuhel because he wasn't hitting after the first week of last season, was still hitting clean-up for Harris with a .190 average 10 days ago. "You're not being benched, just keep swinging," Harris told Robbie. Now Robinson's hitting again.

IN THE CASE of Marrero, Harris was concerned chiefly about the Nats' comradely acceptance of the little Cuban righthander. He set the example himself by making Marrero welcome to the club. The Washington athletes took the cue, took him into the family, and have been helping to root him in. They all but crushed him with their embraces after he beat the Tigers the other day.

If Harris has a preference for any man on his club, it's Sid Hudson. He expressed himself about that in Florida when there was no assurance that Hudson might have a good season. "I broke him in in 1939," said Harris, "and I know Sid has it here," and he tapped the region of his heart. "He gives you everything."

To get two of those victories, Harris went down the line with Hudson when better judgment might have dictated a pinch hitter late in the game. "We were lucky to pull 'em out for Sid, perhaps," said Harris, "but after pitching his heart out he deserved a shot at being the winning pitcher."

IN ST. LOUIS the other day, Harris took full blame for the Nats' defeat by the Browns. "Charge that one to me, he told his players after the game. They had been expressing wonderment that with the Nats trailing, 1-0, he left Dick Weik in to hit for himself in the eighth inning.

Privately, Harris confessed, "I was trying to get Weik home as a winner. I should have lifted him for a pinch hitter, but I was gambling that we'd come up with the tying run somehow. I blew the game but I wanted that kid to know I would go along with him. Maybe it will help him to win some for us later in the year."

Right now, Harris has so many pitchers fit and ready that his problem is to find work for them all. He is spotting them for what he thinks is their effectiveness against certain clubs. "I didn't dream our pitching would be so nicely squared away I'd have a surplus," he says. "It's a wonderful dilemma."

Celebrities Tickets Make Ideal Birthday Presents

BILL GILBERT, a Maryland University freshman, was stumped for one of the few times of his 19 years. His sister has a birthday coming up in June and he didn't know what to buy her.

Then he thought of the National Celebrities Golf Tournament June 3-4 at Army Navy and the Bob Hope Celebrities Show.

"That's it," he said. "I'll buy her tickets to the golf tournament and the show. What a deal."

You're dead right, Mr. Gilbert.

Bob Hope will emcee the big show at the Armory the night of June 3, a Saturday, with many of the Celebrities appearing on the program.

The golf field will include Hope, Danny Kaye, Arthur Godfrey, Babe Didrickson, Marlene and Alice Bauer, Patty Berg, Ben Hogan, Gene Sarazen, Henry Picard, Milton Berle, Walter Winchell, Toney Penna, Charlie Justice, Frank Leahy and dozens of other famous people.

Phils Score 6 in 8th To Down Pirates, 6-3

Philadelphia, May 24 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies scored all of their runs in the eighth inning, three on Dick Sisler's home run to defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-3 tonight. Wally Westlake's homer in the seventh accounted for all of the Pirates' tallies.

Richie Ashburn opened the eighth by beating out a bunt. Gran Hamner walked and Sisler tied the score with his sixth homer of the year. That was all for Murry Dickson and Bill Werle took over the pitching duties for the Pirates.

An error by Nanny Fernandez, Jimmy Bloodworth's single, two wild pitches by Werle, a walk to Andy Seminick and singles by Jim Konstanty and Ashburn produced the other three tallies.

Cards Trim Giants, 2-0, Behind Rookie Boyer

New York, May 24, (AP).—Cloyd Boyer, young righthander up from Rochester, turned in the best mound performance of his brief big league career today in pitching the St. Louis Cardinals to a 2-0 victory over the New York Giants.

The 22-year-old rookie answered an emergency call when starter Max Lanier complained of a twinge in his back in the second inning.

Boyer allowed only two hits in seven and two third innings but six bases on balls kept him in trouble.

Lanier was replaced by Rookie Cloyd Boyer, who held the Giants to two singles in seven and two-thirds innings as the Cards won, 2-0

Senator Rock Almost Wins 2 Trot Races

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Senator Rock scored a sensational triumph at Rosecroft Raceway last night but it came a race too late, preventing him from being the highest-priced winner in Maryland harness history.

Senator Rock, making only his third start in two years, took the second division of the Oxon Hill, $3000 feature, and paid what would seem like a thumping good price, $19.

Real story is what happened in the first division. In that one, the fifth race against the same 10-horse field, Senator Rock went off at $125.40 to $1 and lost a photo decision by a short head to Joe Eyler's Sing Song, who paid a trifling $7.

Driven by Lou Myers, York, Pa., and owned by Dr. L. C. Rees, Millersville, Pa., Senator Rock would have returned a $252.80 payoff. He had to settle for a $65.40 place and $17 show return. The Hylan entry of Blue Steel and Spruce Up, which finished third and fourth respectively.

The same horses went again in the seventh race, at an added sixteenth of a mile. This time the crowd of 6,352 that had scorned Senator Rock made him an 8 to 1 choice.

He won by a neck over Blue Steel and Spruce Up was a nose behind. Sing Song, previous winner, was in the photo too, only another neck back.

Lord Carlton Wins

Lord Carlton defeated Reb Russell in last night's Turner's Arena wrestling feature with a head spin and body press in 13½ minutes.

W. Va. Solon Ousts Turnesa In Britain

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 24 (AP).—Big Bill Campbell, the West Virginia lawmaker, smashed Willie Turnesa's hopes of a second British amateur golf championship today with an eagle three on the "finest hole in the world."

A beautiful drive on the 446-yard par five seventeenth and a spectacular approach that left only a simple three-foot putt gave the 27-year-old Campbell a 3-and-1 victory over the Elmsford, N. Y. veteran.

The other Americans who survived today's third and fourth rounds were Frank Stranahan of Teledo, Ohio, Dick Chapman of Pinehurst, N. C., James B. McHale of Philadelphia, Ed Gravely of Rocky Mount, N. C., and Bill Goodloe of Valdosta, Ga.

Chapman and McHale, who will play in the National Celebrities Tournament met the least resistance of any of the Americans as they breezed toward a meeting in the semi-finals.

Steady putting gave Chapman a simple 6 and 5 victory over W. S. Whitelaw of Britain in the morning round. He lazied through an afternoon match against E. S. Nugent-Head of Britain, 3 and 2.

McHale found things even simpler. He played what he called only so-so golf in the morning round yet defeated F. H. Crisp, who grew up playing this course, 4 and 2.

In the afternoon he lost only one hole as he whipped Col. W. H. Aitken, another member of the St. Andrews Royal and Ancient Club, 7 and 5.

Musial, Whose .439 Average Makes Him Expert on the Subject, Tells How to Hit

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, MAY 24 (NYHT).—The Polo Grounds gates were still closed and an assortment of cops, a lot of kids and a few cash customers drifted in grubby 8th ave. while authorities scowled back at the misty skies and debated about trying to get in a ball game. There was a card game going in the Cardinals' clubhouse, players loafed in the warm room, half dressed and wondering whether to complete their change. Stan Musial, sitting in a corner, was pulling on his flannel rompers.

Red Smith

A visitor said, "Stan, from what I can read in the averages, you seem to have decided to pass up home runs this year and just go for base hits. Is that intentional?"

"Well," he said slowly, "I'm hitting more to left field."

"You've deliberately changed, trying to do that?"

"Yes. The first part of last season I was trying to pull every ball to right and I was popping 'em up or hitting nice easy grounders to second base. When you just try to meet the ball, the home runs come naturally."

"Eddie Dyer told me last year that you felt the fans wanted home runs from you and you were hurting your average trying to please them."

Musial smiled ruefully. "Well, the year before, I'd hit 39. That was the most I ever hit in my life," He sounded apologetic.

"HITTING IS a matter of timing, anyway, isn't it? Not a question of overpowering the ball."

"That's right," Musial said. "When you're trying to hit a home run, you never hit one. You're trying to meet the ball 'way out in front of the plate like this, and your timing, your swing, your stride, your eyes—everything gets off and you pop up."

"Have you ever got off to such a good start as this year?" (His average at the moment had plummeted to a mere .439, with two home runs.)

"A lot of it is luck," he said. "I've got some lucky hits this year."

"I know of only one intentional home run," a fellow said. Not counting the one Babe Ruth called in Chicago, that is, if that gesture that we all saw really meant he was calling one. I've never been really sure about that.

"But there was one season about 20 years ago when the Senators were challenging the Athletics and went to Philadelphia for a Memorial Day doubleheader. Al Simmons won the first game with a home run but hurt his knee and it swelled up so badly the doctor said he couldn't play the second game.

"'Can I hit?' Al asked. The doctor said yes, on one condition. 'You can't run,' he said. 'You've got to strike out or hit a home run.'

"So in the second game Simmons went up as a pinch hitter and won it with a home run. Just obeying orders."

Boston Gets Early Lead, Hangs on To Triumph

St. Louis, May 24 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox got off to a flying start with three runs in the first inning, then staved off two Brownie threats and went on to a 7-to-5 triumph over the St. Louis Browns tonight.

The Sox jumped on St. Louis Starter Lou Kretlow for four walks and a double by Walt Dropo in the opening frame.

They picked up two more talies in the third on two singles and Al Zarilla's triple.

The Browns began picking on Mel Parnell in their half of the third on two singles, a double by Roy Sievers and an error by Bill Goodman.

St. Louis almost tied the count the next inning when Owen Friend and Reliefer Harry Dorish singled, Billy DeMars sacrificed and Parnell threw a wild pitch, letting Friend get home. But Dorish was out at the plate when he tried to score on Dick Kokos' grounder.

Griffs Blow 4-Run Lead, Lose, 5 to 4

Bearden in and he wild-pitched the fourth run home.

Nagy Walks 6 in 3 Innings

But except in the ninth the Nats never did mount another serious scoring threat. Nagy, meanwhile, was showing his rustiness after a two-week layoff, and walked six men in the 3 2/3 innings he lasted.

Nagy walked in the Indians' first run with a pass to Rosen with the bases full in the third, and Bucky Harris got him out when he walked a pair with two out in the fourth.

Haynes pitched the Nats' 4-1 lead away inside of two innings. Vernon and Doby greeted him with singles in the fifth, and with two out Boudreau got 'em both home with a single to right. That hit pruned the Nats' lead to 4-3.

One inning later, the Nats were a beaten ball club. Losing pitcher, Haynes.

IN SHORT . . . Cleveland fans, already disgruntled by those three straight losses to the Yankees, booed Manager Lou Boudreau on his first trip to the plate . . . Sam Mele was in the Nats' lineup despite a painfully-infected tooth . . . Mel Harder, substituting for the suspended Al Simmons as the Indians' first base coach, looked kinda sheepish when Grasso picked Mitchell off that bag in the first inning . . . When the Indians benched Big Luke Easter who was hitting only .241 they replaced him with Mickey Vernon, a .143 hitter . . . Nagy lost a hit in the third inning when Bearden deflected his hot smash directly into Joe Gordon's glove . . . Dick Weik will make his second start of the season tomorrow in the Nat's farewell game of this road trip. He'll be opposed by Bob Lemon, the Indian's No. 1 guy.

Under Pressure Upsets Maryland Day in Pimlico Feature

Bill Bennings . . .

AT PIMLICO

DEAR FOLKS:

The track crew, with the help of that lucky old sun, did a swell job for the Wednesday program. Despite terrential downpours late Tuesday, the course was slow this morning and fast before the program ended. Racing Commissioner Frank Small tells me the consolation double will soon be in the Maryland rule book. Despite a series of offtracks, favorite players have been shut out only once, last Monday. One or more public choices won on each of the first 16 days of the meeting. Ray Haight left to take over the race casting at Detroit and will be heard on a national network several weekends. Only three more days of racing here. Delaware Park opens on Monday. Hagerstown opens on Tuesday. Both must buck the Rosecroft trots. See you on the rail, somewhere.—BILL.

Nash Rides $12.20 Shot To Nose Win

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, May 24.—Under Pressure, under an all-out pressure ride by Jockey Ronnie Nash, upset the favorite players in a crowd of 9940 at this Old Hilltop track today.

The gelding, owned by E. Barry Ryan, got up in the final jump to hang a nose defeat on C. H. Schied's Maryland Day.

The latter, named for the Preakness and other 3-year-old stakes, set the pace in the Withers won by Hill Prince early this month. Third money went to Brookmeade Stable's Donation.

With Maryland Day installed an odds-on favorite, Under Pressure rewarded his scattered backers with a $12.80 mutuel after going the 6 furlongs in 1:12 4/5 over a track slightly on the dull side.

Apprentice Eddie Sanders, while he failed by inches with Maryland Day, had his innings and just about sewed up riding honors for the meeting. He won with W. G. Myer's Ballinakill, a $6 favorite in the third race, came back in the fourth to score with Dr. W. C. Ensor's Olecranon at a $17.40 mutuel, and then took the seventh with C. L. Creswell's Hunter F at $11.

This trio of successes gave Sanders 21 winners for the meeting

Randall Upset By Naiman

Naiman handed Randall its first Washington Post-Industrial League setback yesterday by winning, 12-3, on the West Ellipse. A six-run splurge in the ninth sewed it up for Naiman.

Panella Hurls for Maryland In League Playoff Tonight

Greensboro, N. C., May 24.—The Southern Conference baseball playoffs open tomorrow night with Maryland meeting Virginia Tech and Wake Forest facing Clemson in a doubleheader. Winners play for the championship Saturday night.

Nick Panella, slender righthanded curve baller from Anacostia High in Washington, gets the starting pitcher's assignment for the Terps. It's his second outing against the Gobblers. Last time, they beat him, 2-0, his only loss against four victories.

Panella, a pretty good hitter himself, will get lots of batting help from such Terp sluggers as Third Baseman Eddie Crescenze, swatting .408, John Hunton, .378, Rightfielder Gene Emsweller, .333, and Leftfielder Jake Graham, .322.

Maryland has an 18-7 record against all comers, and 6-4 in the conference. The Terps finished third in the southern division, but qualified for the playoffs along with first place Tech because second place George Washington failed to play the required number of home-and-home series.

Hoya Prep Golfers Gain Quarterfinals

Georgetown Prep, with the advantage of being the host course, yesterday sent four men into the quarter-finals of The Washington Post's second flight Schoolboy Golf Tournament, which takes place Saturday morning.

Prep's Gene Howerdd became the tourney favorite by knocking off Coolidge's Howard de Laski, 4 and 3. The other Prep quarter-finalists are Skippy Nash, Mike Nehr and Joe O'Brien.

Yesterday scores—Nick Kotz (St. Albans) defeated James Cruise (Georgetown Prep), 2 up; John Stehman (Western) defeated John Parsons (Roosevelt), 4 and 3; Dennis Folken (Blair) defeated Ernie Heffner (Western), 3 and 2; Hubert Hoff (Coolidge) defeated Jim Barrett (Capitol Pages), 1 up; Gene Howerdd (Georgetown Prep) defeated Donald deLaski (Coolidge), 4 and 3; Joseph O'Brien (Georgetown Prep) defeated Irving Salamy (Paul Junior High), 6 and 5; Mike Mahr (Georgetown Prep) defeated Sam Boor (Bethesda), 4 and 2; Skippy Nash (Georgetown Prep) defeated Wally Beasley (Blair), 3 and 1.

Pairings for Saturday (quarterfinals)—a. m.—Kotz vs. Stehman; 9:05—Folken vs. Hoff; 9:10—Howerdd vs. O'Brien; 9:15—Mahr vs. Nash.

Gonzaga Tops Little Hoyas For Title, 5-4

Gonzaga High, held to one hit by Bill Nolan, defeated Georgetown Prep, 5-4, yesterday at Prep to win the Catholic Metropolitan League crown.

Although the Little Hoyas jumped on Gonzaga Pitcher Dick Burke for 13 hits, five errors cost them the game. The decisive one was Second Baseman Jack Day's muff of Bud Donalin's grounder in the fifth inning. Two runs scored on the error.

O'Donnell Pitches for Ramblers

The Interhigh title hopes of Wilson High will ride on Pitcher Ev Eynon this afternoon when the Green Tigers meet defending champion Eastern in Griffith Stadium at 3:30.

With three days rest after his Monday three-hitter against Anacostia, Eynon will be trying for his seventh league victory against no defeats.

Eastern, which defeated Wilson in the regular season, 8-1, is expected to pitch Jim O'Donnell, also unbeaten in his three previous starts.

Although he was nicked for six hits in Eastern's 5-4 defeat of Coolidge in Monday's playoff game, O'Donnell showed fine control in sneaking eight third called strikes past Colt batters.

Eastern Coach Bobby Hart, partial to letting seniors play in the big game, will have seven men on the field playing their last high school game

Prigg Wins Pole Vault

Carl Prigg got Woodrow Wilson off to a good start in the Interhigh track and field championships by copping first in the pole vault at McKinley Tech Stadium.

It was the only final event on yesterday's bill, the rest being taken up by qualifying heats for the finals tomorrow at Tech.

Marshall Hts. Plan Dropped

the homeowners fix up their own property.

Paving of roads and installing water and sewer facilities will take time, General Young said, because the District spreads its limited funds for such work over the whole city.

With one exception, the 200 or more Marshall Heights property owners who attended yesterday's hearing at the District Building favored abandonment of the project.

General attitude of the 15 speakers was: We don't want to lose our homes. If the District will install utilities, we will do the rest. Under the Redevelopment Act, the RLA would buy up the land and residents would be provided housing elsewhere.

Said Otis Sutson, who lives in Marshall Heights at 5117 B st. se.: "We have been waiting for years for water, for sewers and for streets. The children walk to school through the mud because there are no streets. If I'm not careful to wipe my feet when I go to work anyone can tell the part of the city where I live."

Only person appearing in favor of Marshall Heights redevelopment was Percy B. Anderson, who said he owns property there but lives at 1220 Girard st. nw. Anderson did not speak at the hearing, but told reporters:

"People have lived there for a number of years, but made no effort to develop it. Its development should more properly be handled on an entire, rather than a piecemeal basis."

The Marshall Heights project, recommended to the Commissioners by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, has been controversial from the start. Most property owners there have always opposed it. Two successive Congresses have refused to appropriate any money with which to start work.

Marked Time

While Marshall Heights was on the books, the Redevelopment Land Agency marked time. Recently, however, two steps have been taken which indicate the agency may get a chance soon to start its work. They were these:

1. NCPPC instructed its coordinating committee to submit a list of possible sites for new projects at the commission's June meeting.

2. The Commissioners last week asked the Housing and Home Finance Agency to reserve 2¼ million dollars in capital grants for such work in the year starting July 1. The Commissioners acted under the 1949 Housing Act. This means they can obtain funds direct from HHFA without going through Congress.

Besides killing the Marshall Heights project, yesterday's action also marked the first time all three Commissioners have met together since last September. Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young, said Guy Mason voted with the two Youngs on the question. Mason returned last week from a 7½-months illness.

Two Alleged Aides of Erickson Talk With District Attorney

New York, May 24 (NYHT).—Two more of Frank Erickson's alleged aides showed up today at the district attorney's office, bringing the total to three since Tuesday.

The two who appeared today said they had been unemployed since May 2—the day District Attorney Frank S. Hogan's detectives raided Erickson's office on Park ave. Their names were in Erickson's files and were on a list of persons sought since Friday.

They identified themselves as Thomas Robinson Smith, 45, of Malverne, N. Y., and Sol Singer, 59, of New York City. They came in on a subpena, as did William J. Sullivan, 52, of Maspeth, N. Y., the day before. Their lawyer, Harold O. N. Frankel, said they will refuse to waive immunity.

Their names were found in folders which gave their income tax returns and showed whom they were employed by as "clerks." Smith's file gave his tax returns from 1939 through 1949. For last year, he reportedly earned $4,686 and gave Harold Richards as his employer. Richards is a material witness held in $100,000 bail in the grand jury investigation of Erickson.

Singer's folder contained his tax reports for the years 1943 through 1949. In 1948, when Jack Lennon, an Erickson attache sentenced as a convicted bookie in New Jersey last year, was listed as his employer, he reported earnings of $3,630. In 1949, when Richards was listed as his employer, he reported an income of $4,534.80.

Smith and Silver were questioned for an hour by Alfred J. Scotti and Vincent A. G. O'Connor, assistant district attorneys, and received subpenas to return Friday. Sullivan will return for further questioning tomorrow. The only persons before the New York County grand jury were six businessmen who bet substantial sums with Erickson.

Correction

The Washington Post erroneously reported Wednesday that Western High School won last year's drill competition. Actually Woodrow Wilson high school took top honors in 1949. This year Western won second and third places in the drill competition. The Post regrets the error.

Morals Check Funds Voted

say what they were. He said they represented new information not included in his 16-page report last week to the District subcommittee.

Wherry noted the fact that both groups had been unanimous for the investigation. He said he saw no reason why the resolution for the $25,000 should not clear through the Senate by unanimous consent.

In one revision of the investigating resolution, members said the Expenditures Committee changed the wording so that the inquiry would be national in scope rather than limited to the District in some of its phases.

As the Hill subcommittee presented the resolution to the Senate, it specified that the investigation should cover the preparedness of Federal officials only in the District to protect life and property against the security threat "inherent in the employment of perverts" in Federal agencies.

The Expenditures Committee struck out the reference limiting the study of preparedness to offices within the District, making it broad enough to cover Federal agencies throughout the country.

In preliminary hearings, the Hill subcommittee received an estimate by Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the Metropolitan Police Vice Squad, that there are 5000 homosexuals in Washington, and 3750 of them are on the Government payroll.

Woman Juror Forfeits Fees For Absence

A woman juror yesterday forfeited $56 in jury fees after her absence from a damage suit in District Court caused a mistrial on May 2.

She is Virginia R. Bell, 28, 2221 Naylor rd., se., a receptionist at the Gold Key Club, one of the 12 bottle clubs the United States Attorney is trying to dissolve.

She was impaneled May 1, and sat during the first day of the trial. When she failed to appear May 2, Judge David A. Pine adjourned for one hour and, when she remained absent, he declared a mistrial.

The Government filed a petition to show cause why she should not be held in criminal contempt.

Yesterday, after hearing testimony from Miss Bell that she had a sore foot on May 2, which subsequently was operated on, Judge Pine agreed to dismiss the petition, after she had agreed, through her attorney Charles E. Ford, to forfeit her jury fee of $7 a day.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

Humphrey Asks Agencies' Aid in Thorough Study Of U. S. Leave Policies

An extensive study of the Government's annual and sick-leave policies has been ordered by a Senate subcommittee headed by Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.).

Humphrey has requested the Budget Bureau and the Civil Service Commission to make the inquiry in cooperation with the professional staff of the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee.

The Minnesota Senator is chairman of a subcommittee handling the bills introduced by Senator Douglas (D., Ill.) to cut annual and sick leave for the Government's 1,300,000 classified and per-diem employes.

In identical letters to the Budget Bureau and Civil Service Commission, Humphrey asked to be supplied with information on the accumulation of leave by Federal workers in the different salary grades. He also asked for a comparison of Government leave practices with those in State and local governments, and in private industry, as well as an analysis of the Government's many different leave laws, regulations, rules, etc.

It will take several months to complete the study. Action on the Douglas leave-cutting bills isn't likely to be taken by the Humphrey group until after the survey is complete.

The Administration has urged Congress not to alter the leave system until such a survey as Humphrey has requested has been made. It opposes action now on both the Douglas bills and the House-approved rider to require employes to take eavel this year as they earn it or else lose it. Besides, the Administration doubts whether the House rider will stand up in Federal court.

REORGANIZATION: Several new "little cabinet" positions were created under the President's reorganization plans as approved by Congress.

Two new Assistant Secretaries of Interior were set up in the reorganization plan for that department. The probable appointees are:

VERNON D. NORTHROP, the department's administrative officer, who is slated to be Assistant Secretary in charge of administration, and,

DALE E. DOTY, executive assistant to the Interior Secretary, who would be promoted to Assistant Secretary.

A new Assistant Secretary for Administration was set up for the Commerce Department. The best bet for that position is Bernard L. Gladieux, the executive assistant to the Commerce Secretary.

The President will probably resubmit a modified plan to revamp the Treasury Department, one that would set up an Assistant Secretary for Administration for it. If such a plan goes through as expected, the new "little cabinet" post would go to William W. Parsons, administrative assistant to the Secretary.

Northrop, Doty, Gladieux, and Parsons are all able career public servants, among the best. Little cabinet appointments would be recognition of their outstanding services.

OHE: Housing Expediter Tighe Woods yesterday unveiled another plan to keep his rent control agency operating through June 30, at least.

The House voted $600,000 to continue OHE through June 30, a cut of $200,000. Unless the cut is restored by the Senate, Woods proposes: (1) to have the 1400 professional employes of his 2800-man staff go on leave without pay for a week during the month of June, or (2) to fire outright 1647 of his employes as of June 6, leaving a staff of about 1150.

Each of the 2800 employes, including Woods himself, will get a June 6 layoff notice within the next day or so. What will be done after that date depends on what Congress does in the meantime.

NOTES: At Labor, Charles Sharkey and Joseph Posner have been elected delegates to the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes August convention from the Labor lodge . . . The Karsten subcommittee of the House Expenditures Committee meets today on the several bills to have the Government pay premiums on surety bonds that more than half a million Federal workers are required to carry . . . The transfer of Maritime to Commerce has delayed the reorganization of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Action Urged To Stimulate Streetcar, Bus Riding

Citizens Federation, In PUC Fare Brief, Suggests Council On Transportation

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Creation of a transportation advisory council to study how to attract more patronage for Washington streetcars and buses was proposed yesterday by the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The suggestion was made in a brief filed by the federation with the District Public Utilities Commission as a final argument on a Capital Transit Co. petition to increase fares. Long briefs also were filed by the company and John O'Dea, People's Counsel.

Hearings on the Capital Transit petition began April 4, and were recessed three weeks ago to await preparation of the briefs. The CTC asked a fare schedule of 15 cents cash, tokens at 6 for 80 cents, and elimination of the pass. Present fares are 13 cents, tokens at 3 for 35 cents, and a $1.75 weekly pass.

PUC Recommendation

The PUC executive accountant and auditor, V. A. McElfresh, has recommended fares of 15 cents cash, tokens at four for 50 cents, and a $2.25 weekly pass.

In the briefs filed yesterday, O'Dea indorsed this proposal, while the federation criticized both schedules but offered no schedule of its own.

The federation, in proposing the advisory council, declared action was essential "toward arresting and reversing the present trend away from the use of public transportation facilities."

It was pointed out that many problems spring from the current trend, including parking, highway and bridge improvements, and that a shift to public conveyances would help in alleviation.

Need for Sound System

In addition, it was stated, "maintenance of a sound public transportation system" is "essential to the wellbeing of the city" and "in times of emergency may prove essential to the welfare of the Nation itself."

Vernon V. Baker, chairman of the federation's public utility committee, and Herbert P. Leeman, federation president, prepared the brief. They suggested that the District Commissioners set up a council of representatives of PUC, city departments, CTC, business and civic groups.

"Only through some such action can the public hope for a surcease from frequent cutbacks in service and raises in fare and for the maintenance of the best possible public transportation system," the brief declared.

Arguments on Pass

On continuation of the weekly pass—key point in the fare discussion the briefs argued:

Federation—"Should be retained at a price not more than, and preferably less than, 15 times the price of one token."

O'Dea—"Until the present hearing there had been no complaint by the CTC that the use of the weekly pass had been abused . . . The weekly pass should not be abolished."

CTC—"Pass fare is improper and discriminatory in that it forces token and cash fare users to pay higher fares."

Trial of New Rates

A second matter of contention—a proposal by McElfresh for a trial period on new rates—brought out these views:

O'Dea—A six-month period "would give sufficient time to examine and analyze results obtained under the increase . . . The commission has the power to issue an order authorizing a fare structure for a temporary or trail period."

CTC—"We know of no authority, under the statutes by which the commission derives its powers to allow the commission to experiment with the company's fare structure."

Proper Return

On proper rate of return on investment there were these arguments:

Federation—". . . under present conditions should not exceed 6 percent."

O'Dea—The 7½-percent allowable return set by PUC previously "is more than ample."

CTC—A 10-percent rate of return is needed to maintain "the financial integrity of the company."

Alexandria Confederate Dead Honored at Graveside Rites

The Washington Post

HONORED DEAD—Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Jones of 506 Elm st., Alexandria, Va., place Confederate flags on tomb of 34 soldiers buried in the Christ Church yard after memorial services yesterday at the church in Alexandria marking the eighty-ninth anniversary of Confederate troops leaving for war

A handful of the Confederate faithful gathered in Alexandria in yesterday's twilight to honor the men who left the town in 1861 to join the Army of Northern Virginia.

The 20 descendants were outnumbered even by the 34 Confederate dead under the mound in Christ Church yard, where peonies and roses were placed as "Taps" sounded and the bell in the old church tolled.

But what they lacked in numbers they made up in both devotion and volume of oratory.

His voice fairly making the plaster in the parish hall tremble, Gordon Wilkins, past commander of Washington's Sons of the Confederate Veterans, lashed out at "this iniquitous FEPC."

"This country," boomed Wilkins, "has always been dominated politically by two doctrines—strong centralization of power, which is the philosophy of the North, and sovereignty of the States, which is the philosophy of the South.

"There is but one alternative to oppose the trend to centralized Government, which leads to totalitarianism. This is the fundamental philosophy of the South and southern people, exemplified by the great Democratic party from Jefferson as far as Roosevelt, at least."

Martin E. Greene, former business manager of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, paid tribute to the "flower of Southern manhood" which on this day 89 years ago "left their homes and loved ones to meet the invader, who already had put his foot on Virginia soil.

"From Bull Run to Appomattox, their path was marked by glorious achievement. They were poorly clad—many in rags—their equipment was mediocre, their manpower limited. And yet for four years they were able to withstand the resources of an enemy who had at his back door the resources of the world."

From the parish hall the 20, led by R. Samuel Luckett, commander of the Robert E. Lee Camp of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, marched to the graveyard next door.

Near their head were Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Jones of 506 Elm st., carrying small Confederate flags. He is 68 and she 63. Jones' father fought in the Stonewall Jackson Brigade, "The Bloody 44th," and was wounded four times. Mrs. Jones' father was a surgeon in the 13th Virginia Regiment.

A small band played "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Taps" and a rifle squad from Battery B, 710th AAA Gun Bn., National Guard, fired a volley.

The 20 carried their roses and peonies and placed them on The mound beneath which the 34 men of the Army of Northern Virginia lay. The bell tolled in the old church where Washington was a vestryman and Lee was confirmed.

The ceremonies were sponsored by the Robert E. Lee Camp of the "Sons" and by the Nellie Custis Lee Chapter, Seventeenth Virginia Regiment, United Daughters of Confederacy, which earlier in the day placed wreaths on the Confederate Monument at Prince and Washington sts. The monument faces south.

Senate Gets $23 Million Water Plan

Committee Backs Ten-Year Program For Expansion of District's System

The Senate District Committee voted unanimously yesterday to call on the Federal Government for up to 23 million dollars in loans for expanding the District water supply system during the next 10 years.

The program is contained in a bill which the committee approved by voice vote and sent to the Senate floor. The loans would be repaid during the 20-year period ending about 1980.

A similar bill is slated for consideration by the House District Committee in a meeting set for 11 a. m. today. A majority of the House group has indicated support of the measure through a poll by the committee staff.

Senator Lester C. Hunt (D., Wyo.), chairman of the Senate District Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee, presented the water-loan bill in the Senate committee meeting. He said the Commissioners had shown "very substantial reasons" for its prompt enactment.

Hunt cited testimony stating that on several days last summer the water system was strained beyond normal capacity. Officials had reported that further stress might cause a threat to health.

Hunt said that parts of the system are more than 100 years old.

John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), House District chairman, said today's meeting would cover both the water bill, and the Senate-approved measure to continue the District child day care center program.

D. C. Fights Apartments In Basements

The District Department of Inspections is stepping up its efforts to do away with illegal basement apartments permitted here for two years after the war to help meet the housing shortage.

J. J. Ilgenfritz, deputy director of inspections, yesterday issued a warning to owners of "hundreds" of such units to comply with building regulations or face court action. All apartments and rooming house license applications are being checked on this point, he said.

Clark King, assistant corporation counsel in charge of prosecutions at Municipal Court, said six landlords—largest group since the drive to force compliance started nearly two years ago—appeared before him Monday on complaints of leasing such illegal apartments. They were told, he said, to make necessary building changes or get rid of their tenants or face court action.

Ilgenfritz described the events leading to the present situation:

In July, 1946, the District adopted temporary building regulations so that many basement and some attic room used for living rooms need the only one-third (instead of one-half) above ground, the window area need be only 5 percent (instead of 10 percent) of the room's floor area, and no minimum ceiling height was required (normally seven feet.)

Gun Victim, on Stretcher, Names Assailant in Court

The Washington Post

BULLET VICTIM—Peter E. Brampton, 23, who has been hospitalized since last July 15, when he was shot by a man he says he befriended, testified in District Court yesterday from a stretcher. He is the principal witness against Harold L. Hatter, 26, on trial for assault with intent to kill

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Ten months after he was shot in the neck and paralyzed from the heart down, Peter E. Brampton, 23, was wheeled into District Court yesterday to identify his assailant.

Hatter

Flat on his back, Brampton testified he was shot by a coworker, Harold L. Hatter, 26, whom he had befriended during a United Mine Workers staff picnic in Rock Creek Park July 30, 1949.

Brampton said he and others left the picnic to take Hatter to his home, 2634 Tunlaw rd., nw., because Hatter had drunk too much.

Without provocation, Brampton testified, Hatter loaded a .45 caliber automatic pistol and fired twice. Only the first shot hit him, he said.

Brampton has been in Emergency Hospital ever since the shooting. Two doctors testified yesterday it would be "a miracle" if he ever fully recovered. He breathes with difficulty.

Brampton is left-handed, and this fact figured in yesterday's proceedings. Brampton testified that, after he had been shot, Hatter put the pistol in his right hand. "He should have known I was left-handed," he said. "We worked together for almost a year."

Hatter is charged with assault with intent to kill, and assault with a dangerous weapon.

He took the stand yesterday and testified he remembered nothing from the time he was placed in a car at the Rock Creek Park picnic grounds until he was being questioned at the Seventh Precinct. He said he never intended to kill Brampton.

Hatter's attorney, Denny Hughes, described him as a "dead drunk defendant," not responsible for his acts, and incapable of forming any intent.

Police Private Thomas E. Miller testified that he found Hatter, after the shooting, in the bathtub, clothed in his socks and undershirt. The water was running, Miller said, and Hatter's shoes and pants were also in the tub.

The case is expected to go to a jury of five men and seven women this morning after Judge James W. Morris' instructions.

Assistant United States Attorney Grace Stiles argued to the jury that Hatter intended to kill and proved he was capable of forming this intent when he loaded the pistol, cocked it, shot, and then placed the weapon in Brampton's hand.

At the time of the shooting Brampton was a clerk in the UMW Welfare and Retirement Fund office. He lived at 1830 Connecticut ave. nw.

Improvement Asked in Social Life Of Parolees

Justice Committee Told Parole Boards Ignore Full Needs Of Ex-Convicts

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The Committee for the Improvement of the Administration of Justice may try to improve the social life of Washington's paroled convicts.

The move, lauded by Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws of District Court as an important forward step, was suggested to the committee yesterday by G. Howland Shaw, member of a subcommittee investigating rehabilitation of criminals.

Shaw, addressing the group at its meeting, said that he believed that parole boards were "naive" in not meeting the problem of what a criminal does with his spare time after he leaves the penitentiary.

He said parole boards sometimes acted as if they believed that all a man needs is "sleep and work." As a result, he said, there is little effort made to see that the ex-convict uses his free time in such a manner that he does not return to a life of crime.

He said that ex-convicts dreaded the thought that people they meet will ask them about their past.

"The parolee fears that he might give himself away by some slang expression that denotes prison," he said.

More efforts, he declared, must be made to see that the ex-convict is not forced by circumstances to seek out "his own kind."

He said that parolees are often given jobs unrelated to trades they learned in prison, and are sensitive to criticism, fearing that the criticism is leveled because of their past.

The committee was also presented a possible "preview of the future" when all court proceedings will be taken down on sound recorders and even motion pictures made.

Such techniques, Judge Laws said, will allow appellate courts to adequately review a trial, where the judge by inflections or accented words, may influence a jury to return a verdict in accordance with his beliefs.

Judge E. Barrett Prettyman of the United States Court of Appeals told the meeting that in his opinion better methods are needed for proving "economic and scientific facts" during trials.

Col. E. Goring Bliss observed that fewer experienced jurors are reaching court panels here because of the migration of landowners here to nearby Maryland and Virginia. He said that the new and inexperienced jurors resulting from this is creating a "serious problem."

On 'Pentagon Rate'

Arnold Lines Asks Boost In Joint Fare

The Arnold Bus Lines yesterday asked the Interstate Commerce Commission for a 6-cent increase in its current 9-cent share of a joint "Pentagon rate" with Capital Transit.

The joint fare now is 16 cents, for trips between Washington and the Pentagon, Navy Annex and Arlington Farms.

Capital Transit now receives a 7-cent portion of the joint fare. The ICC already has received requests from both the A. B. & W. Bus Co. and Capital Transit that a similar 16-cent joint fare serving the Pentagon, Navy Annex and National Airport be raised to allow each of the companies a 15-cent portion of the fare.

Thus a bus ride between the District and Virginia Government installations could cost 30 cents, if all the requests are granted.

Film to Be Shown

A film on child-parent relations, "Preface To Life," will be shown at a meeting of Alexander D. Goode Post 386 of the Jewish War Veterans tonight at 8:30 p. m. at the JWV Home, 3147 16th st. nw.

PUC Counsel Raps Study by Bus Company

District PUC Counsel Lloyd B. Harrison yesterday called "incomplete and inaccurate" a survey offered by one bus company to oppose extension of a competitor's service near Fairfax Village.

Harrison attacked figures submitted by the Washington, Marlboro and Annapolis Motor Lines Co., which is fighting a Public Utilities Commission order extending Capital Transit Co. lines C-2 and W-4 on Alabama ave. se., to Pennsylvania ave.

Attorneys for both bus companies then asked permission to make a resurvey and submit the results at a hearing scheduled for May 31 at 10 a.m.

WM&A has contended extension of Capital Transit's C-2 line would compete with WM&A lines on Pennsylvania ave. and mean an annual loss to the company of $27,000. CTC also opposes extension of the C-2 line as duplicating the W-4 service.

According to evidence presented by WM&A officials last month at the first of four hearings on the case, 1189 persons in the Fairfax Village area were asked the means of transportation they now use and whether they would change if Capital Transit lines were extended.

The survey indicated that 438 said they would use Capital Transit service if it were made available. Harrison pointed out, however, that they were not asked whether they would also stop using WM&A service or whether they now use it.

The PUC ordered the extension last year, but WM&A protested the decision to District Court. The court remanded it for further hearing.

Man and Wife Hurt When Auto Hits Pole

A 76-year-old Baltimore man and his 74-year-old wife were injured yesterday when their car struck a pole on U. S. 1, near Beltsville.

The couple, Philip B. and Ella Cissell, were admitted to Prince Georges General Hospital with head injuries.

Burrows Renamed President of Burroughs Unit

Dr. Robert N. Burrows was reelected to a fourth term as president of the Burroughs Citizens Association at the final meeting of the season held last night in Taft Junior High School, 18th and Perry sts. ne.

Others named were: Arthur Heaps, vice president; Miss Doris A. Meade, secretary; Frank J. Sazama, treasurer; and Mrs. Henry A. Bartlett and Miss Catherine Flynn, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

In other business, the association backed the reappointment of James E. Schwab to the District Recreation Board; urged emergency Congressional appropriation for the maintenance of the Maternal and Child Welfare Health Clinics, and suported a Fort Davis Citizens proposal asking that public land sales be well publicized.

'Drummer's' Goods Turn Out to Be Stolen, Mostly

A 29-year-old "traveling salesman" whose car was his home and his office was arrested last night because most of his merchandise seemed to have been acquired by theft, police reported.

Taken to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation was Gary S. Sheapham of no fixed address. He was arrested after two cars were broken into on the Ellipse last night.

In Sheapham's car, police said they found cameras, movie projectors, a typewriter, watches, guns, luggage, clothing, a bell off a ship, hubcaps, papertissue holders, and innumerable other items. Park Police Plainclothesman Philip Birch said five housebreaking cases have been solved by identification of some of the evidence.

New Hospital Gets Approval At Hearing

The opposition was outnumbered last night at the first public hearing on a bill to provide a 150-bed hospital for Montgomery County, to be located on a 27-acre site on Forest Glen rd. near Georgia ave. in Silver Spring.

About 50 persons attended the hearing of the Montgomery County Council at the county courthouse in Rockville on a proposed million dollar bond issue to finance the project.

Groups favoring the measure were the Silver Spring Board of Trade, the Seven Oaks Manor Citizens Association, the Allied Civic Group, the Capitol View Citizens Association, the Argyle Citizens Association and the Silver Spring Hospital Association.

The only opposing organization was the Woodside Park Citizens Association.

A third element was represented by the League of Women Voters, the Planning Committee of the Community Chest and Council and the Edgemoor Citizens Association which asked the council to defer action until the final report of the hospital facilities advisory committee.

The Council-appointed committee has already filed a preliminary report.

Dr. Mark V. Ziegler of the United States Public Health Service, who heads this committee, said he favored several parts of the bill, but took exception to the location. Proponents argued that the present site is nearer the center of population. Francis W. Hill, jr., president of the board of Suburban Hospital in Bethesda, said he opposed the bill personally, and thought the people should raise the money themselves through public subscriptions.

Caught in Act

Man Sounds 5 Alarms to See 'Em Roll

Beset by 10 false fire alarms in a six-hour period, police yesterday arrested a 24-year-old man who they said admitted turning in five of them just to see the fire engines roll.

He is Percy Lee Robinson of 924 8th st. ne. He was arraigned on five charges of turning in false alarms and held under $300 bond. His case was continued until June 1.

Detectives Joseph Bonaccorsy and Mark Gray said they arrested Robinson at 2 a. m., at 7th and L sts. ne., after they saw him pull a box.

A few minutes later, as the fire equipment rounded the corner, Robinson was firmly ensconced in the police scout car.

Police said Robinson admitted pulling these other alarms: 12th and V sts. nw.; 5th and Florida ave. nw.; Florida ave. and 3d st. nw. and 5th and L sts. ne.

Police said he was not involved in three alarms sounded from a box at the Birney School, Nichols ave. between Howard and Sumner rds. se.; an alarm at 42d and Grant sts. se., or an alarm at the Marjorie Webster Junior College, 7775 17th st. nw.

New Pupils to Register

Children who will enter the Clara Barton Elementary School this fall will be registered today during the summer round-up program from 9:30 a. m. to 11:30 a. m. at the school, 7425 MacArthur blvd. nw. Parents are to bring birth certificates and records of vaccination and diphtheria immunization.

2 Men Arrested At Corner Face Gaming Charges

Vice squad detectives arrested two men at 11th st. and Pennsylvania ave. se., yesterday afternoon on gambling charges.

They are Charles Boyd, 31, of 420 12th st. se., and Abraham Blum, 40, of 222 8th st. se. Both were charged with operation of a lottery and possession of numbers slips. Blum, in addition, was charged with setting up a gaming table.

The men were released under $1500 bond each and their hearings were continued until May 31 after an arraignment before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence. Lawrence issued the warrants for their arrest.

Vice Squad Lieut. Roy Blick said his detectives used marked money in making their investigations.

2 Rallies Scheduled Tonight On Fairfax School Bond Issue

Two more "pep meetings" are scheduled in Fairfax County tonight to drum up votes for a proposed $10,500,000 school bond issue, to be decided in a public referendum May 31.

Advocates of the bond issue—to finance a "critical" school construction program—have planned rallies at the Herndon High School and in the Oak Street School in Falls Church, both at 8 o'clock. They invite opponents of the expenditure as well as those who favor it.

At Herndon, the speakers will be W. Alvord Sherman, president of the Fairfax School Emergency Committee, and Fred W. Robinson, chairman of the County Board of Education. The Falls Church rally will be addressed by Newell Blair and Robert J. Carmody, both members of the school emergency committee.

Both meetings will be conducted as forum sessions, and will feature public discussions of the proposed issue.

The $10,500,000 to be decided on by the voters is part of twelve million dollars the board of education deems necessary to meet school building needs to 1951. The remainder, school officials say, will come from grants and loans from

Police Say Woman Admits False Report of $800 Holdup

A 34-year-old woman admitted police said, yesterday, that she falsely reported an $800-to-$1000 holdup last month.

The woman, Mrs. Ava K. Swann, of 7050 Oxon Hill rd. se., was charged with making a false report and posted $25 collateral.

Mrs. Swann's original report claimed that on April 24, an armed bandit took the money while she was making out accounts for three weeks' receipts.

Her report stated, police said, that the holdup man fled down three flights of stairs from the office.

Earl Wavell Dies; Led 'Desert Rats'

London, May 24 (AP).—Field Marshal Earl Wavell, desert warrior who won the first Allied land victories in the Second World War, died in a nursing home here today.

Marshal Wavell

The one-eyed British soldier who smashed Marshal Graziani's Italian army in North Africa in the dark days of 1940 and 1941, underwent a severe abdominal operation on his sixty-seventh birthday, May 5. He long had suffered from jaundice.

Recalled by the Labor government from his post as Viceroy in India early in 1947 because he disagreed with the policy of giving India immediate independence, Wavell spent the last years of his life indulging a taste for music and poetry.

He edited an anthology of verse, "Other Men's Flowers" which was generally acclaimed. Politically, he fought in the House of Lords for improved pensions for British veterans of the Indian service.

As Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell he commanded the British and Australian army of "desert rats" in North Africa when Allied fortunes elsewhere were at their lowest ebb after the fall of France, the Balkans and Greece.

Although erect and spruce and shielding his empty eye socket behind a gleaming monocle, the commander believed too much "spit and polish" was bad for an army. His soldiers called him "Archie" behind his back. He also believed bold strategems and gambles were the mark of the successful general.

He gained sudden fame with his amazing counteroffensive in 1940-41 which drove Italian troops 500 miles across the barren desert in 60 days.

Starting from 130 miles inside Egypt, the drive was not halted until it had wrested most of Cirenaica from the Italians and taken 140,000 Italian prisoners.

Many Italians surrendered because they believed Wavell's forces were overwhelming. Hundreds of dummy guns, mingled with the real guns, and the explosions of firecrackers fooled the enemy.

The fruits of the victory were soon wiped out when the Germans sent Field Marshal Erwin Rommel to rescue the Italians.

Wavell took the blame. Under political pressure, he had sent virtually all trained and equipped troops to defend Greece.

In July, 1941, Wavell was sent to India as commander in chief of British forces. After Pearl Harbor, he was named supreme commander of all Allied forces in the Southeast Pacific, with headquarters in the Netherlands East Indies.

Allied defeats caused him to be returned to India, and in 1943 he was named Viceroy.

Earl Wavell soldiered in faraway places from the time he was 18, joining the famous Scottish Black Watch regiment in the final phases of the Boer War in South Africa in 1901.

He was a veteran of skirmishing with tribesmen on India's northwest frontier in 1908.

In the early years of the First World War, he was a liaison officer with the Russian army in the Caucasus. He lost his eye, however, in fighting on the Western front, in the battle of Ypres.

In 1915 he married Eugenie Quirk, daughter of a colonel, who bore him three daughters and a son.

Alexandria Tax Deadline Changed

Alexandria has extended to June 15 the May 15 deadline for payment of current real estate taxes.

The taxes that are due cover 1950, and there is a 5 percent penalty for failure to pay by June 15.

City Tax Collector C. Page Waller said the decision to extend the deadline resulted from the fact that tax bills were not mailed until last Friday. They were scheduled for mailing around April 1. Waller attributed the delay to a recent reassessment of real estate and a shortage of personnel in the tax office.

Graduation Proves a Trying Experience

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

AT PLAY CENTER—There were caps, gowns and diplomas for the Edgewood Playground play center graduates yesterday. # 10,000 Tall Cedars Here Today

Some 10,000 persons are expected to attend the three-day national convention of the Supreme Forest of the Tall Cedars of Lebanon which opens here today.

Activities will include an entertainment program at Constitution Hall Friday night, a parade down Constitution ave. at 2:30 p. m. Saturday, and services Sunday at 9 a. m. at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

Headquarters of the convention will be at the Mayflower Hotel.

Today the delegates will visit Mount Vernon and place a wreath on the tomb of Washington at 10 a. m.; visit the George Washington National Masonic Memorial in Alexandria and lay a wreath on the statue of Washington at 11 a. m.

At 1:30 p. m. a visit to the tomb of the Unknown Soldier is scheduled. Registration will be at 2 p. m. at the Mayflower, and there will be a ceremonial by District 20 Forests at the McKinley High School, 2nd and T sts. ne. afterward.

Mrs. Herbert M. Course Funeral Rites Friday

Funeral services for Mrs. Herbert M. Course, 71, wife of a rural Washington State Presbyterian minister, will be held at 3 p. m. Friday at the Pumphrey Funeral Home, Bethesda. She died here Tuesday.

Because of ill health, she had been staying since May 9 with a daughter, Mrs. A. F. Hoenack, Seven Locks rd., Bethesda. She died at Suburban Hospital after suffering a cerebral hemorrhage.

Her husband, who was attending the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Cincinnati, as a representative of Wenatchee Presbytery, Coulee City, Wash., flew here when Mrs. Course's condition became worse.

Memorial services will be held later at Wilson Creek Cemetery, Wilson Creek, Wash., where she will be buried.

Mrs. Lulie McCarty Dies; Funeral to Be Friday

Funeral services for Mrs. Lulie N. McCarty will be held at 11 a. m. Friday at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Graveside services and burial will be at 1 p. m. Friday at the Green Hill Cemetery, Stephens City, Va.

Mrs. McCarty died Tuesday at the home of a daughter, Miss Alice N. McCarty, 2039 New Hampshire ave. nw., where she had lived for 25 years. She had been ill several months.

Mrs. McCarty had lived in Stephens City before coming to Washington. She was a member of the Southern Methodist Church there and a member of the Mount Vernon Methodist Church in Washington.

Police School To Start Again

Thirty-nine policemen will take a month's refresher course beginning June 5 when the Police Academy resumes classes for the first time since June, 1947.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, said he plans to maintain the refresher courses until every man in the department has taken them.

The first "class" will consist of policemen selected by the department from sixth-grade private to lieutenant. Sessions will be held six days a week.

The school will be under direction of Inspector Arthur E. Miller, Assistant Superintendent of Police. Members of various professions, including newspapermen, will lecture.

H. P. Simpson, Map Maker, Dies at 78

Hendree Paine Simpson, 78, of 2325 Glebe rd., Arlington, retired Naval Hydrographic Office cartographic engineer, died Tuesday at his home following a long illness.

Mr. Simpson was with the Hydrographic Office nearly 50 years before retiring in 1944.

His monographs, accepted as authoritative by the Hydrographic Office and the United States Geographic Board, concerned the determination of geographic positions and of geographic terms and names in foreign languages.

Born in Tuskegee, Ala., Mr. Simpson was an 1891 engineering graduate of the University of Alabama.

He came to Washington in 1892 to work for the Coast and Geodetic Survey, transferring shortly to the Hydrographic Office.

There he held successively the positions of hydrographic draughtsman, chief of the lithographic section, chief of the compilation section and chart editor.

Mr. Simpson was known also for his work in hybridization of irises.

Mr. Simpson had been a member of Central Presbyterian Church in Washington since coming to the city, and formerly was a deacon of the church.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Edith Smith Simpson, of the home address, and two sons, Ewing G. Simpson, of the home address, and R. Smith Simpson, of Mexico City.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p. m. Friday at the Hines Funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Funeral Rites Held For Mrs. Avice Greene

Funeral services for Mrs. Avice Magee Greene, 69, retired Treasury Department section chief, were held yesterday at Western Presbyterian Church, 1906 H st. nw. Burial was in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Greene, a lifelong resident of Washington, died Monday in her home, 2203 Foxhall rd. nw., after a long illness. She retired in 1945 as chief of the Loans & Currency Division's correspondence section, after 28 years with the Treasury Department.

Mrs. Greene attended both Western High School and old Columbian College. Last December Mrs. Greene and her husband, Karl W. Greene, returned to Washington from the Philippine and Hawaiian Islands after six years. Mr. Greene worked with the Alien Property Office. She was an active worker in the National Women's Party.

Besides her husband, she is survived by her mother, Mrs. Jessie F. Magee, of 2209 Foxhall rd. nw., and two sisters, Miss Lottie Magee of the same address and Mrs. Amy Wood, of 2207 Foxhall rd. nw.

Dr. Heitmuller Rites Today; Eye Doctor

Funeral services for Dr. George H. Heitmuller, 81, organizer of the first eye clinic in District public schools, will be held at 3 p. m. today at the Hines Funeral Home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery. He died Tuesday.

Dr. Heitmuller was found unconscious in bed at his home, 1333 N st. nw., by his wife. He was pronounced dead by a Casualty Hospital physician.

Much of his 36 years' service here as public school medical inspector before his retirement in 1939 was spent in treating school children for faulty eyesight. He organized the first eye clinic at Jefferson School. It was later moved to Henry Elementary School.

A native of Germany, the noted ophthalmologist received his A. B. degree at Johns Hopkins University and his medical degree at the University of Pennsylvania.

He joined the District Medical Society in 1897, the year after he was clinical assistant at the Royal London Opthalmic Hospital.

C. W. Simonson Dies; Customs Bureau Aide

Clinton Wise Simonson, 53, a Customs Bureau official, died Tuesday night of a heart disease at Arlington Hospital. He suffered a stroke a week ago while at work.

A native of York County, Va., Mr. Simonson came to Washington in 1931, and had been in the Customs service for 31 years. He was assistant head of the fiscal section of the bureau's division of management and controls.

Mr. Simonson entered the service in 1919 at Newport News, Va. He received a law degree at the National University Law School and in advanced accounting work at the Benjamin Franklin University while here. His home was at 2518 Fort Scott dr., Arlington.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Dorothy L. Simonson; his mother, Mrs. Beulah Simonson of St. Petersburg, Fla., and several sisters.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p. m. at the Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin st. nw.

Girl Told Friend She Married for Money; This Was Whispered to Man, Just as Wife Was Learning to Love Him; Now There's Rift

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 20 years old. Next month is my second wedding anniversary. Over this two-year period my feelings have changed towards my husband from those of security to love.

You see, I married Dean for his money. This might seem to be no problem at all, inasmuch as Dean loved me when he married me. But a mutual friend, in whom I confided, told Dean of my real motive for marrying him. I was ignorant of this development until recently.

I first became aware of Dean's knowledge of my secret when I discovered that he and our mutual friend had developed much more than just a friendly acquaintance. And Dean's attitude of complete indifference has helped to confirm my suspicions.

I have known for a short time that a baby is on the way. Naturally I haven't told Dean yet, as his attitude of indifference is unbearable. I don't want to use the baby as a means of bringing him back to me. I want him back only if he still loves me. My real problem is—if Dean does still love me, am I deserving of his love? I shall greatly appreciate your advice. V. C.

She Was Always Fond of Spouse

DEAR V. C.: It appears that the so-called mutual friend may be trying to break up your home, in the hope of marrying Dean's money next, assuming this betrayer of confidence is a female, as I take to be the case. Ordinarily men don't stoop so low. I am reminded of the old saw about the three most rapid media of communication, namely, telephone, telegraph and tell-a-woman.

As for your avowed duplicity in marrying Dean for money, not love, I think the heart of the matter is that you misunderstood yourself from the first in believing that, and did yourself and him an injustice in launching the rumor. Taking into account your anxious defensive emotional immaturity, which is evident throughout your recital, I am sure you've always cared about as much for Dean as you could have cared for any suitor, sex partner or helpmeet up to this time.

Perhaps you were definitely more intrigued by Dean's affluence than his personality in courting days. But even so, if you hadn't been fond of him from the outset of marriage, with a valid sense of congeniality, the more intense attachment that you now report could not have developed. Without mutual liking, conjugal intimacy would have been oppressive to you; and you would be grateful for a domestic climate of indifference nowadays, instead of hungering for assurance of mate love.

Anxiety Fuels Possessiveness

YOU SAY that Dean's current attitude of indifference is "unbearable," meaning that it is conspicuously frosty, I suppose, and therefore you aren't telling him about the baby, because you don't want to use sentimental appeal to bring him back. You want him back only if he still loves you, that's your stand, which is more indicative of selfish pride and a will-to-dominate than it is expressive of true and growing devotion.

You started marriage with feelings of complacent dependency, I think, sure that Dean's love and your passive acceptance gave you the upper hand in the relationship. Then as his allegiance cooled, due either to hurt pride or loss of enthusiasm for your self centered personality, you began to feel anxiously possessive, a disturbance that usually sparks fervid infatuation in a parasitical temperament. Thus you say you've changed from "security to love." But in my opinion, your capacity to love hasn't matured yet.

"Love suffereth long and is kind," we are told. And remember you can't grow figs from thistles. Your cagey defiance of Dean's coolness is half defensive, half advantage seeking. It is ruinous policy in the current crisis. Give up the idea of trying to humble his ego and bring him back on his knees to sue reconciliation, uncertain what your response would be. Practice the Golden Rule. Make the first move to heal the breach. Tell him hopefully about the baby, and let your new feelings for him speak through your manner hereinafter. If you can regain his love, by manifestation of honest devotion, you will deserve it, of course. So dismiss what's done and start afresh. M. H.

To Be Like You

It is so easy to be good . . . When I am close to you . . . Or when I merely think of all . . . The noble deeds you do . . . Your gentle love inspires me . . . To emulate your way . . . And practice every virtue that . . . Will glorify the day . . . To live unselfishly for those . . . Who need a helping hand . . . To share the burden that is theirs . . . And try to understand . . . And in the promise of your love . . . So kind and so sincere . . . My sorrows seem to vanish and . . . My troubles disappear . . . I only know I love you and . . . I want to be like you . . . To light the lamp for others and . . . To make their dreams come true.

Trumans Honor Guests as Aides Entertain

By Marie McNair

TWENTY-TWO good-looking officers (and all bachelors) from the Army, Navy and Air Force gave a party yesterday with President and Mrs. Truman as honor guests.

It's come to be an annual event with this group, known as the White House Aides, and, as last year, guests were invited to Anderson House, headquarters of the Society of the Cincinnati. Col. Don Lowry, senior aide, heads the group, and with Lieut. Col. Robert F. Scott, USMC, and Lieut. Col. Leo E. Fielder, USAF, was elected to greet the President and First Lady as their car drew up in the driveway.

The other hosts? Well, some were stationed in the foyer, others in the patio where bars and buffets were set up under giant magnolia trees.

There was Lieut. Comdr. William Hudgins in crisp summer "whites" and Maj. Hugh Richardson, Maj. Jack P. Love, Capt. Robert Fechtman, Capt. Adam Eisenhauer, Capt. James K. Sullivan, Capt. Ralph E. Talley and Lieut. Fred J. Archibald, all USA.

Navy hosts were Lieut. Commanders Martin J. Mulderrig, jr., Robert W. Hayler, jr.; Louis L. Meier, jr. Lieut. William A. Campbell, jr., on duty on the Presidential yacht, the U. S. S. Williamsburg; and Lieut. William H. Lanagan, USMC.

The seven Air Force aides include Lieut. Col. Godfrey McHugh, Lieut. Col. Leo E. Fielder, Lieut. Col. John L. Locke; Maj. Elmer H. Jose, jr., Capt. Louis P. d'Autremont, Capt. Jack D. Johnson and Capt. Robert S. Rivers.

Marine Band Made Music

IN THE great two storied ballroom, the Marine Band played during the afternoon. There was a bar and another buffet alongside, and more food and drink was on tap in the glass enclosed gallery between that room and the outdoors.

Ushered through the library to the flagstone terrace, President Truman and Mrs. Truman found that they constituted the receiving line. The President touched glasses with former Secretary of the Navy, John Sullivan; munched a deviled egg and chatted with General Patrick J. Hurley, Charles Murphy, Presidential Special Counsel, Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Brannan, Postmaster General and Mrs. Jesse Donaldson.

The guest list included shoals of pretty girls, favorites with the young hosts.

I said "hello" to Jane Lingo, just back from a short stay with Margaret Truman who was too busy to get down for the party. Saw Gery Clifford, the Clark Cliffords' daughter, and Dorothy Dyer, with her mother, Mrs. Robert A. Dyer.

Nancy Thomas carried her protesting Chihuahua under her arm; Admiral James Foskett squired his petite daughter, Margaret; Mary Benton Gore was surrounded by swains; so was Beverly Farrington, daughter of the Hawaiian Delegate and Mrs. Joseph Farrington.

Top Brass Showing Entirely Unified

HIGH up in the ranks were Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff; Gen. Lauris Norstad and Mrs. Norstad wearing a dark blue shantung frock; Fleet Adm. William D. Leahy; former Marine Commandant Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift; Adm. and Mrs. Joseph Jelley; Adm. and Mrs. Albert G. Noble, and Adm. John W. Roper, with Mrs. Roper wearing violets on her hat.

Senator Millard Tydings joined Mrs. Tydings who was an early arrival. Mrs. Max Truitt came early too. Mr. Truitt and Mrs. William Boyle arrived together and Mr. Boyle, who heads the Democratic National Committee, wasn't far behind.

Gen. and Mrs. Louis Renfrow were there. So were Mrs. Oscar Chapman, wife of the Secretary of the Interior, and Mrs. Robert Dennison, the two expecting Admiral Dennison to join them at any minute.

Going down the "line," U. S. Minister to Luxembourg Perle Mesta was right on the heels of Mrs. Morris Cafritz. Justice and Mrs. Tom Clark were there, Mrs. Clark in navy blue with a red rose on her wide-brimmed hat. I saw Deputy Chief of Naval Operations Admiral Charles Wellborn and Mrs. Wellborn and Lieut. Comdr. Harry C. Alexandorfer with lovely Mme. Miriam Heyo in a full skirted blue frock and big hat to match.

Col. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle was accompanied by Mrs. Biddle whose cartwheel leghorn hat was covered with black tulle heavily emzroidered in jet.

Peruvian Artist Guest at Preview

REYNALDO LUZA, Peruvian born artist, has painted some of Washington's loveliest ladies. They'll be hanging at the Pan American Union until June 3.

Yesterday the exhibition was opened with a bang-up preview party given by the Peruvian Ambassador and Senora de Berckemeyer, whose portrait and that of the Ambassador's young niece, Zoila, are included in Senor Luza's collection. The Ambassador and Senora de Berckemeyer who wore a swirling zebra stripe red white and blue print, stood at the entrance to the former "map room," to welcome the guests and introduce them to the tall good-looking artist.

The 22 portraits circled the room on special screens for background. There was Senora de Dillon, wife of the retiring Ecuador Ambassador, in person and in paint; and Mrs. Edward G. Miller, who brought her husband, the Assistant Secretary of State, to see her likeness, a vision in white with tawny hair and swanlike throat.

Perhaps the most striking, if a layman can be a critic, is the portrait of Mrs. Ken Regan, the Texas Representative's wife. A real beauty, Roberta Regan has been painted in a chartreuse gown. Mme. Mangor's portrait brought crowds around it. So did the painting of Mme. Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, who was also there yesterday.

Others on exhibition, both in flesh and oil, were Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg and Mrs. Henry O. H. Frelinghuysen. Among those "just looking" were Mrs. Harold Burton, the Spanish Ambassador-at-large and Senora de Lequerica, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Parker West and Mrs. Emerson Howe. Mrs. Emil Hurja and Mrs. Jean DeLattre-Seguy wandered out to the terrace to hear the blue coated Air Force band play and to sample a famous Pisco sour, the Peruvian national drink.

Inside and out I saw Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim and met them later at the White House Aides fete; Mrs. Roy St. Lewis with her guest, a Mrs. Cooke of New York; Luis Quintanilla, Mexican Ambassador and Chairman of the Council of OAS, and Alberto Lleras, Secretary General of the OAS, and Senora de Lleras.

Artist's Sketches On Exhibit

THE artist, who paints most of his subjects in water color, does delightful sketches too, some of which were on view yesterday. He left his native Peru in 1918 after studying architecture at the University of Louvain in Belgium, and in the United States sold his early work to magazines. In 1921 the artist joined the staff of Harpers Bazaar and for 27 years he was that journal's fashion illustrator, working in London and Paris with the leading designers of that era. Ten years ago, Senor Luza returned to New York continuing his activities in the fashion and commercial fields. Among outstanding commissions were the new Lima airport and the Peruvian pavilions at the Paris Exposition in 1938 and the World's Fair in New York in 1939.

Hawaii Sets Stage For This Party

HAWAII, romance islands of the Pacific, was the theme for the dinner given in honor of America's most romantic couple, Vice President and Mrs. Alben Barkley, last night. Hosts in the Mayflower's East Room were Mr. and Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg of Washington and Mr. and Mrs. John H. Perry of Florida and New York.

Leis had been flown in from the islands and an Hawaiian orchestra played throughout the evening. In addition there was a hula dancer and a singer of plaintive Hawaiian songs. Tables set for 10 were decorated with exotic flowers and pineapples.

The Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne were among the guests. Others were Senator and Mrs. Spessard Holland of Florida, Representative George Smathers, Senator and Mrs. George Malone, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle.

In the group also were Eugene Black, president of the International Bank, and Mrs. Black; former Ambassador and Mrs. Joseph Davies, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Hunt of New York and Mr. and Mrs. James Hodges who flew in from Havana.

A birthday cake glowing with candles was brought in for Mrs. Biffle whose birthday is today.

Another Farewell For the Elaths

THE ISRAELI Ambassador and Mme. Elath, who are scheduled to leave shortly for London, were honored at a cocktail party at the Shoreham yesterday. Hosts were the Israeli Counselor and Mrs. Moshe Kerne.

Among the some 200 guests were the Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet; Danish Ambassador and Mme. Henrik de Kauffmann; Ceylonese Ambassador and Mrs. Corea; Mrs. Josef Winiewicz, wife of the Polish Ambassador; Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Brannan; Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter; Senator and Mrs. Irving M. Ives; Senator and Mrs. Guy M. Gillette; Senator and Mrs. Owen Brewster, Senator and Mrs. Herbert Lehman; Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George C. McGhee, Commissioner of Education and Mrs. Earl J. McGrath, Deputy Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Dean Rusk, Judge and Mrs. Charles Fahy, Judge and Mrs. David L. Bazelon, Mr. and Mrs. George Ignatieff and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Gaston.

English Union Goes To a Garden Party

LEANDER McCORMICK-GOODHART was host to members of the Washington branch of the English-Speaking Union at a garden party yesterday at Bellapais, his home on the Potomac below Alexandria. The occasion was Great Britain's Commonwealth and Empire Day. Receiving with the host were Albert W. Atwood, president of the Washington branch, and members of the board.

Refreshments for the fete, typical of an English garden party, were tea and coffee, sandwiches and the traditional strawberries and cream. Among the 200 guests were Admiral Sir Frederick Dalrymple-Hamilton and Lady Dalrymple-Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lincoln O'Brien, Admiral and Mrs. Harold Stark, Mr. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Auchincloss, Mr. and Mrs. Copley Amory, Mrs. Barron Dubois, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. W. D. Connor, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, Col. and Mrs. Robert H. Guggenheim, Admiral and Mrs. Albert Cushing Read, Mrs. John Kee, Mrs. John Clifford Folger, Mrs. Arthur M. Chichester.

Senator Brewster Dinner Honoree

SENATOR and Mrs. Owen Brewster were the guests in whose honor Mr. and Mrs. Burks Summers entertained last evening at Holly Oaks, their home near Rockville, Md. The dinner was one of a series.

Other guests were the Chilean Ambassador and Senora Nieto del Rio, the Spanish Ambassador-at-large and Senora de Lequerica, Senator and Mrs. James Kem, Senator and Mrs. John W. Bricker, Senator Alexander Wylie, former Senator and Mrs. Davis Elkins, M. and Mme. Camille Chautemps, Mr. and Mrs. Gould Lincoln, Mr. and Mrs. Constantine Brown and Mrs. Fred Britten.

DATEBOOK DATA:

"To celebrate the birthday of His Majesty the King" the British Ambassador and Lady Franks have issued invitations for a garden party on Thursday, June 8, from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m.

Red and Gold Roses Accent Ceylon Fete

DOZENS of roses in the national colors of Ceylon, red and gold, decorated the embassy on Wyoming ave. last evening for the party honoring the Ceylonese Minister of Transport, Sir John Kotalawela.

The Ambassador and Mrs. Corea received with their guest, the hostess wearing a gold and white sari.

Among the many guests who dropped in between 6 and 8 p. m. to meet the foreign official were the Australian Ambassador and Mrs. Norman J. O. Makin, New Zealand Ambassador and Lady Berendsen, South African Ambassador and Mrs. G. P. Jooste, Norwegian Ambassador and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet, Egyptian Ambassador and Mme. Abdul Rahim, Indian Ambassador Mme. Pandit, Mexican Ambassador and Senora de la Colina.

Also, Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Brannan, Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Francis P. Matthews, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George McGhee, newly appointed Ambassador to Canada and Mrs. Stanley Woodward.

Kitchen Sink Blues Can Be Turned Rosy by a Little Common Table Salt; Color Can Stretch an Apartment

DEAR ANNE:

A reader asked about a wooden drain board that had become discolored: If she will cover this with table salt and take a heavy scrub brush and scrub until the salt is nearly gone, she will find grease gone and color restored. It will probably take several scrubbings for a very soiled board. If she will do this about once a week, she can keep her drain board always clean and sweet. This was told me by a butcher, who said it was the way they kept wooden meat blocks in good condition.

A. Reader.

DEAR ANNE:

Why not suggest to W. K. L., Arlington—who wrote in about sterilizing bottles—that she do this job while doing the dinner dishes and fix the formula afterwards?

M. J. P., Washington.

DEAR ANNE:

With hundreds of small efficiency apartments now becoming available to business girls in the city, Washington's furniture dealers seem to have forgotten about this potential market and might well arrange some of their model rooms to show how a BG can live, eat, sleep in one room about 12 by 18 feet with a pullman kitchen. Any suggestions you may have as to available literature on the subject, or ideas of your own, will be greatly appreciated.

KATY, D. C.

From time to time, enterprising stores here, as elsewhere, do arrange special displays of cleverly arranged efficiency furnishings. Perhaps your letter will touch off a series of them! Meantime, there are some general principles to keep in mind as you go about your shopping.

The important thing in the successful decoration of an all-purpose living room is to maintain the illusion of space, while packing in all the essentials for a comfortable life. The first secret of so doing is to make color work for you, not against you. The second secret is to make every possible inch of space serve you not once but twice.

The temptation to introduce a riot of color into a small space is particularly hard to resist in today's market where so many luscious hues are offered in fabrics and accessories. There's no need to be drab, surely. But stick to one basic shade in walls and curtains, and use this same shade as the background color in your slip-cover fabric. This will avert a cluttered feeling. Your carpet or scatter rugs, too, should blend into the background color.

Your color contrast should be introduced in your smaller accessories such as ash trays and lamps shades, and these should harmonize with the figure in your upholstery or slipcovers. In such a room as you contemplate, it's also wise to keep the woodwork and walls the same color. Conspicuous woodwork contrast cuts down the illusion of spaciousness.

In choosing furniture for the all-purpose room, be sure that each article has a purpose, and preferably two or three. Avoid the merely decorative object. A secretary, if it's not too large, is a good choice, for example, because the top serves as bookcase, while the bottom can be used as a chest, and in between there's usually a pull-out surface for desk work. Choose chests of a style which extend to the ground, never the kind which waste space on ornamental legs. Many modern manufacturers make groups of chests and cabinets which can be grouped together, providing the maximum amount of storage space. Everything personal not actually in use should be kept out of sight in a bed-living room, so adequate storage space should be your first consideration.

You'll find a section on "Combination Rooms" in the recently published "Encyclopedia of Home Decorating" (Garden City Publishing Co.) with some provocative photographs of one-room apartments. You may get some tips there.

DEAR ANNE:

Have you a recipe for cooking lettuce with vinegar and bacon fat? I'm sure there are others like me who have lettuce in their gardens now and would like new ways to use it.

M. E. M., Owens, Va.

Here's a recipe for "Wilted Lettuce" taken from "The Joy of Cooking" (Bobbs Merrill). Saute 4 or 5 slices of bacon. Remove it from pan and cut into small pieces. Add to the drippings ¼ cup mild vinegar, 1 teaspoon fresh herbs chopped (optional) and 2 tablespoons sweet or sour cream (optional). Heat this and add the bacon. Pour dressing while hot over lettuce, and serve at once.

Soroptimists Give Keys

Ten high school students were honored yesterday by the Soroptimist Club for their "leadership, scholastic achievement and service to their schools."

Honor keys were presented to the eight senior high school and two Catholic school honor students during the sixth annual award luncheon of the Soroptimist Club.

The girls receiving the awards were Barbara Walker, Anacostia; Shirley Ward, Roosevelt; Patricia Durdon, Notre Dame Academy; Nell Weaver, Woodrow Wilson; Barbara McFarland, Central; Shirley Clagett, McKinley; Virginia Stanton, Eastern; Molly Holden, Country Day School of the Sacred Heart; Marian Francis, Calvin Coolidge, and Minerva Heller, Western.

Miss Rae Epstein, chairman of the civics committee and program chairman for the luncheon, introduced three past key award winners, Mrs. Jean Lee Eareckson, Miss Virginia Lane and Miss Nancy Warner.

Among guests at the luncheon were the mothers of the 10 award winners and Mrs. Florence Meara, under whose presidency the Soroptimist Club inaugurated key awards in 1945.

On the Soroptimist program were the Girl Trio from Roosevelt High School, the Misses Dorothy Scates, Sarah Busby and Dooley Stephanos, accompanied by Miss Emma Louise Thompson.

How Many Angles Can a Hat Take?

THIS hat does practically everything—including turning somersaults. It turns completely over, only to take on a new angle.

When you first see this hat, you think it might be a big bertha collar. It is made of rayon linen, stiffened with rows of stitching. Through two small, metal bound openings at either side of the "collar," runs a grosgrain ribbon, holding the whole together; and more important yet, holding it on the head.

Once you've tied it on, the rest is up to you. By twisting the brim this way and that, you can arrange a dozen different hat silhouettes. If you're the demure type you can tie the ribbons under your chin and have a poke bonnet. Best of all, you can shift the brim to suit the shape of your face. For instance, twist it into a peak for extra height, flare it wide in a butter-fly silhouette, if you want width at the top.

At any rate, it is a hat to challenge your imagination. And it is serviceable as well, for it rolls up into a tiny package which can be tucked into a traveling bag or an over-size pocketbook. To freshen it, treat it with a moderately hot iron. Comes in every color, costs only $3.98, and is available locally at Maison's Millinery. And it was created not in New York, or Hollywood, but in nearby Cumberland, Md.

Doctors Told Of Lagging Civil Defense

District physicians who are veterans of World War II were warned last night that civilian defense planning is lagging and needs a shot in the arm from influential groups.

Col. William L. Wilson, chief of the Civilian Defense section of the Surgeon General's Office, outlined the medical phase of defense planning before the Physician Veterans of World War II at the District of Columbia Medical Society.

He suggested means for carrying out "active defense" of a given area, such as the District, in the event of an atom-bomb attack. Planning for such work as treatment of burns and effects of secondary radiation should be emphasized, Col. Wilson declared.

Civilan defense planning "should be speeded up considerably," Col. Wlson told the group. But he said the responsibility lies with the civil Government and the public.

Other speakers on the program included Dr. A. Clagett Gray and Dr. William D. Claudy. Named president of the association was Dr. Eugene J. McDonald; Dr. William B. Walsh was elected secretary-treasurer, and Dr. Charles P. Ryland was chosen vice-president.

Mary F. White Becomes Bride

The marriage of Miss Mary Felicia White to Robert Emmet Healy took place May 20 in St. Matthew's Cathedral. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Russell White of Springfield, Va. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Daniel A. Healy of Waltham, Mass.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white organdy, her veil falling from a Juliet cap. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. William J. Daley was her sister's only attendant. William J. Daley served as best man and the ushers were William Murray and Cormac Cappon of Chestertown, Md.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. On return from their wedding trip to Kittery, Me., the couple will live in Washington.

The bride attended Iowa State College, Marshall College and was graduated from Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia. Mr. Healy was graduated from Boston College. He also studied at the University of Pennsylvania, George Washington University and Yale University. He is employed by the Library of Congress.

Bride-Elect Honored

Miss Jean Lewis, who will be married June 24 to Cadet Robert H. McCandlish, was honor guest at a shower given at the home of her cousin, Mrs. Carol Pike, in Bethesda, on Friday. Mr. McCandlish will graduate from the United States Military Academy on June 6. After the wedding the couple will leave for Germany.

Family Seeks New Inquiry In Boy's Death

Woodland Beach, Md., May 24 (AP).—A renewed investigation of the death of a high school freshman found hanging from a pine tree was asked today on the eve of the boy's funeral.

A neighbor discovered Robert Crawford Monday morning suspended by three leather belts buckled together and fastened to a tree limb.

Frederick L. Mason, a friend of the family, said he, the youth's father, Malcolm H. Crawford, and mother, Mrs. Dorothy Shank, had spoken with Dr. John M. Claffy about the certified verdict of suicide.

Claffy, Anne Arundel County medical examiner who pronounced the verdict Monday night, said he advised them to consult Baltimore morgue examiners who performed the autopsy.

WCTU Voices Opposition to Communism

Officials of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the District of Columbia yesterday voiced their opposition to communism.

"The most important issue of our time is the menace to human freedom by atheistic communism, which is seeking to destroy Christianity and enslave mankind," they declared.

Representatives of the various WCTU unions of Greater Washington adopted the resolution unanimously at a monthly meeting of the executive committee at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts ave.

Despondent Man Hangs Self From Pipe With Sheet

A 54-year-old Washington man was found hanging from an overhead steampipe in a bedroom of his home yesterday, police said.

The man, Walter A. Combs, of 743 Irving st. nw., was pronounced dead at the scene. Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, issued a certificate of death by suicide.

Members of the family told police he had been in ill health and despondent. Police said he used a sheet twisted into a rope, and after fixing it to the overhead pipe, stepped off a bedside table.

The city directory lists Combs as an employe of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Arlington Rape Charges Dropped

Jackson Walter Ager, 35, of 1932 S. Langley st., Arlington, pleaded guilty yesterday in Arlington Circuit Court to three counts of concontributing to the delinquency of minors.

At the same time, charges of raping two 14-year-old wards, placed in his care by the District Welfare Department, were dropped against Ager. A grand jury indicted him in February on three counts of statutory rape, involving the two girls. Associate Circuit Court Judge William Medley referred Ager's case to the probation officer for report before sentence.

Bell to Speak

Daniel W. Bell, president of the American Security & Trust Co. and treasury representative of the D. C. Saving Bonds division, will speak on behalf of the Independence Bond drive at a meeting of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at 12:30 p. m. today at the Burlington Hotel.

Walter Winchell —In New York

Man Playing the Typewriter

Irene Selznick, who shelved Hollywood for Broadway and produced "Streetcar Named Desire" (her first show), is enjoying the final guffaw on "The-Movies-Are-Better-Than-Ever" boys. Her hit grossed $4,500,000, a lot more than most of the films her father (L. B. Mayer) or her ex-groom net today . . . The publishing world is chewing its lower lip over the Scribner scoop of Cardinal Spellman's initial novel, tentatively titled "The Foundling" . . . With Ezio Pinza leaving for Movietown June 1, the premium on "S. Pacific" tickets is higher than ever. The Runyon Fund still offers the choice down-front pews (at box-office fee, plus your generosity). The fund has profited $86,000 to date from the house-seats contributed by that hit, "Kiss Me, Kate," "Happy Time" and "Blondes" . . . Rehearsal crashers report M. Todd's big click in "Peep Show" will be a newcomer terpsicorker named Lily Christine of New Orleans.

There's a line uttered by Gloria Swanson in her forthcoming comeback film, "Sunset Blvd," which should delight Greta: "There are no great screen faces any more, except, perhaps Garbo!" . . . Ken Murray's nickname for Joe: "His DiMagesty!" . . . D. Rose's platter of "Bewitched" is grand. Scads of fiddles . . . One of the ironies of F. Erickson's predicament is that he actually retired three years ago and turned his office over to associates. But he got bored and went back . . . Spring has sprung officially in midtown Manhattan. The St. Moritz sidewalk cafe is packed almost around-the-clock . . . Father's Day novelities include cards made of nylon which unfold into a tie . . . News Item: "Bob Hope asks to be released from Ten Million $ Contract." Wonder what the poor people are doing? . . . Trygve Lie's offices in the new U. N. edifice will be the most luxurious of any exec in the world.

They're still talking about Claire Boothe Luce's tribute to Mrs. FDR at an event the other night: "No woman has ever so comforted the distressed or so distressed the comfortable" . . . They say the big coin behind the gambling and crime drives (about 11 million) came from groups trying to bring back Prohibition . . . The U. of Chicago early next year will unveil "The Dictionary of Americanisms." Lexicographer Mitford Mathews is editing. Only words and phrases originated in the U. S. The first word will be "A" (the abbreviation for Adultery) used by the Plymouth colonists in 1651 . . . The colyum bows low to credit Ogden Nash for the quip recently credited elsewhere, to wit: "Incompatibility if he has income and she is pattable" . . . Item: "Police doubt $15,000 Brink robbery is work of Million $ Bandits" . . . Oh, I dunno. Mebbe they just diddon feel like breaking a big bill.

"The Stars and Stripes Forever" in Dixieland jazz style makes that thrilling march sound like an unnecessary noise . . . The teevy version of "Macbeth" proved Mr. Shakespeare still is the drama's meal ticket . . . Movietown is one place where mediocrity pays. Producers of B-films are among the Nation's highest paid execs . . . Out of the 56 plays this season only 8 are expected to survive the humid spells. A slot machine gives better odds . . . Not long ago the Messrs. Goodson and Todman tied up the rights to "Buffalo Bill." They have a radio and tv series based on the famed character and will soon be enriched from "Buffalo Bill" guns, hats, pants and "Buffalo Bill Toothpicks" . . . "Worlds in Collision" broke the literary pole-vaulting record. Leaped to the top of the best-sellers in 3 wks. . . . Nearly all the cheesecake (leggy) mags are tested on the Rochester, N. Y., newsstands. Seems if they sell there they'll go anywhere.

Dollicious Denise Darcel was introduced over the air as "the star of 'Battleground'." She has a 3-minute role in it. But she makes it register . . . John Crosby's essay on Runyon's stories (as networked) had the zing Damon's always packed . . . Metro chief Dore Schary publicly stressed the importance of cutting production costs and then okayed six million dollars to produce "Quo Vadis" . . . Eugene O'Neill's tragedy, "Desire Under the Elms," is to be musicalized. The idea came from the success of such themes as "Carousel," "Lost in the Stars" and "The Consul," all grim themes with a score . . . Out-of-town nonsensors blue-penciled "Bicycle Thief." It gave the N. Y. exhibitor an opportunity to advertise: "This is the uncensored version!"

Peter Van Steeden, jr., son of the band leader (on the "Mr. Dist Attorney" program), was involved in an auto accident. At court in New Canaan, Conn., the driver of the other car asked for and won damages of $14.75. Later, learning Van Steeden "must be worth millions!" he instituted suit for $75,000 . . . From a Hollywood colyum: "An unknown, Patrice Wymore, clicked in her first film." Unknown? She was embraced by the critics in two B'way shows . . . Any excuse suffices for publishing a pretty face. An obvious press plant such as the actress "with the prettiest shoulders in Hollywood"—got a page one break . . . This gives you an idea of Movietown's popularity around the globe: The most popular periodical in India is a movie mag . . . Ho, hum. The same front pages reporting the bookie scandals featured the names of Sweepstakes winners.

Gertrude Stein's nonsense is now on recordings. Her weird verse makes you think the needle is stuck. Sample line: "Short longer grass short longer longer shorter yellow grass." Uh-huh. A bore is a bore is a bore is a bore . . . At a secret session of the "Cultural Commission" of the Communist Party at their 13th Street joint (on the 9th floor) the other matinee the subject was: "The pernicious influence of W. Winchell." The speakers included V. J. Jerome and Samuel Sillen. They also talked over the blueprint for "infiltrating Broadway" via theaters, night clubs, etc. . . . Time mag hasn't reviewed "Seeds of Treason" yet. It is a best-seller, anyhow . . . Patricia Neway, crowned by the critics (for giving the best femme performance in a musical), was one of the larks in the Music Hall aviary just a few seasons ago . . . Every play revived at City Center this year drew unanimous raves. But the theater lost money . . . Dietrich's old film, "Morocco," now encored at the Museum of Modern Art on 54th, is spiced with episodes that would never get by today's bluepencilers . . . Things that make you wince: The audience applauding a guest on "Who Said That?" for knowing who discovered the Pacific . . . From the Herald Trib's Art Exhibition Notes Dep't: "The textural striations have a contrived, verticle look" . . . The show-off means "stripes."

Science Looks at Gambling Rackets

Nevada Blocks Mobs But Gets Dregs

The American Academy of Political and Social Science, with headquarters in Philadelphia, has collected from hundreds of sources facts about gambling that have long escaped the layman. The Washington Post presents the academy's findings in a series of six articles of which this is the second. They are excerpts from a 133-page report by the 16 specialists which is published in the current annals of the American Academy.

Today's article is a study by a veteran newspaper editor of legalized gambling in Nevada, the only State in the Union that licenses gambling houses and taxes gambling paraphernalia.

About The Author

Joseph F. McDonald, Reno, Nev., has been editor of the Nevada State Journal for the past 10 years. He has been engaged in the newspaper business in Reno continuously since 1915. His knowledge of Nevada conditions covers periods of illegal as well as legalized gambling.

By Joseph F. McDonald

CHAPTER IV

When the State of Nevada embarked on its wide-open gambling experiment nearly 19 years ago, eyebrows were lifted throughout the Nation. Many sermons were preached on the sins of mankind and particularly the callous view of morality held by the people of Nevada.

Gambling has bloomed into a big business, entailing gross winnings by the State's gambling establishments of 41 million dollars for the year 1949.

Because of her small population (91,058 in 1931, when the gambling law was enacted), it was possible for Nevada to turn away from the beaten path. Her people, or at least the majority of them, believed that the best way to strike down an evil was to get it out in the open and control it.

Probably no other State in the United States today could successfully control wide-open gambling.

There are but an estimated 160,000 people in Nevada today, and only two centers of population with more than 10,000. There are only a few citizens who do not know the ins and outs of wide-open gambling and how it is kept under reasonable control.

There are no bosses and no political organization to deal out favors. The people will not tolerate such things, and they are close enough to the picture, because they are few, to understand what is going on.

Until 1945, sheriffs of each county supervised gambling, and a county licensing board passed on the licensing applications. Each city council did the same thing after an applicant had obtained a county license.

That worked fairly well until the war years, when business boomed and the gambling establishments began going big time.

There was an influx of outside interests, particularly in Las Vegas, about 1943-45, which made an effort to grab control of the business. The Legislature took cognizance of the situation in 1945 and placed the control of gambling license applications in the hands of the State Tax Commission.

At the same legislative session, the State imposed a fee or tax of 1 percent on the gross revenue of each gambling establishment. That fee was increased to 2 percent by the 1947 Legislature and it is 2 percent today.

Mobsters Checked

The Tax Commission is the most powerful body in the State. It administers the liquor tax law, the cigarette tax law, and the gambling tax law, sets the tax rates for utilities, livestock, and passes on the budgets of the counties and municipalities in setting tax rates.

The infiltration of mobsters has been more or less blocked. There has been no trouble in Reno aside from an attempt by Bugsy Seigel, shortly before he was killed, to move in with a race track wire, and the recent attempt on the life of a gambler who once had Detroit connections.

The Tax Commission now screens all applicants for past records, and rules out those who have been in trouble.

Fees and Taxes

In addition to the 2 percent tax, gambling-license holders must pay a table tax to the State as well as a license fee to the county and also a license fee to the city.

The table tax, imposed by the State, is graduated, depending upon the number of games licensed in each establishment, as follows: four games or fewer, $750 a year; five games, $1750 a year; six or seven games, $3000 a year; eight to 10 games, $6000 a year; more than 10 games, $1000 a year per game.

Reno collects license fees as follows: roulette, craps, faro, $200 a year per game.

Slot machines, $50 a year per machine or per handle. Poker, pan whist, and similar card games, $60 a year.

Tango, bingo, keno, race horse pool, race horse books, $1000 a year. Race track bookmaking news distribution service, limited to one service in Reno, $250 a year per client served. There are eight such bookmaking places there now.

Gambling Revenue

Gambling revenue has amounted to approximately $1,125,000 in gross taxes and licenses and $280,000 in table fees for the State of Nevada each year since the 2 percent levy became effective.

It has not solved the State tax worries at all, and may have added to them because of the instability of such revenue.

Reno shoulders a considerable expense in policing. It has a police force of about 80 in a city of 35,000 population, and has to deal with assorted riff-raff and numerous petty crimes. This unhealthy situation is disturbing many citizens.

All the games in the larger establishments and also the small ones here are operated "on the square," because volume pays off well.

The gambling establishments, in order to impress public opinion, are the largest contributors to every civic endeavor, from the Community Chest to the erection and maintenance of churches.

One establishment spends $120,000 a year for scholarships for high school students who want to attend the University of Nevada.

Parasite Here to Stay

Prevalence of wide-open gambling has increased the relief burden for the Red Cross, the Salvation Army, and similar agencies, because so many people come here, lose all their money, and are destitute.

Generally speaking, the residents of the community pay little attention to the gambling establishments, but women do play keno to the detriment of their homes, and that applies to about 10 percent of the local residents.

Aside from the slot machines, which are in every drug store, grocery store, and restaurant, and other places, as well as in the gambling establishments, wide-open gambling has little if any effect on children.

They are not allowed in the gambling establishments.

The slot machines outside gambling houses are attractive to children and detrimental, too, although there are few places that let the children play them. There are 6000 slot machines in the State.

Recognized by right-thinking people as a wasteful, nonproductive business with absolutely no moral basis for existence, gambling on a wide-open plane in Nevada is here to stay, it appears, as long as the State keeps it clean and keeps the gangsters out.

Toscanini Here Today For Concert

Arturo Toscanini is due to arrive in Washington this morning to conduct the NBC Symphony Orchestra at 8:30 p. m.

The special train carrying the conductor and the orchestra will be parked at Union Station.

On the 83-year-old Toscanini's schedule for the day is an afternoon rehearsal, and possibly a drive around Washington's tourist circuit.

NBC officials and the White House were uncertain whether the conductor would meet President Truman.

Mr. and Mrs. Truman and Margaret "expect to attend" the concert, the White House said. A meeting between the President and conductors of concerts he attends is a usual procedure.

Today's concert will mark the second time Toscanini has conducted here. He last appeared in Washington in March, 1939, also with the NBC Symphony.

Tonight's program includes the Egmont Overture by Beethoven; Brahm's Fourth Symphony; Debussy's Iberia; a Jota Aragonesa by Glinka, and the Meistersinger Overture and Forest Murmurs by Wagner.

Washingtonians who haven't already obtained tickets are out of luck. The ehall's 3884 seats were sold out four hours after the sale began on April 29.

Toscanini comes to Washington from Pittsburgh. He will leave town about 1 a. m. Friday for Philadelphia.

Crosby Takes Aim At Sitting TV Duck

By John Crosby

DAY-TIME television has been strenuously avoided in this space as a matter of simple sportsmanship. You shouldn't shoot sitting ducks. However, this duck has been sitting in one position so long I'm beginning to suspect he's already dead. If he is, somebody else shot him. I haven't pulled a trigger for months. Also, if he is dead, the body ought to be removed. It's a violation of the sanitation laws to leave these things around.

I have neither the space nor the inclination to go into all of day-time television. I submit only one specimen. Not a typical specimen, either. I've picked out the most terrible day-time program I've yet run across, the deadest duck on the air.

It's called "Okay, Mother" and is on Dumont in New York at 1 p. m. Mondays through Fridays. The bright, particular star of this hideous firmament is Dennis James, a man of many faces, none of them especially edifying. "Okay, Mother," as its title implies, is a salute to motherhood, and if anything will kill motherhood in this country, this is the one that will do it. In Washington, we have the Communists undermining the country and in New York we have Dennis James undermining motherhood. Nothing is safe any more.

Beaters, Perhaps

JAMES or his henchmen—who, I suspect, are trolls—round up two or three hundred mothers every day. I don't know how they do this. I imagine it's something like an elephant hunt. The beaters fan out in the New Jersey veldt, setting fire to the bush and shouting their wierd cries, and gradually they drive the poor, hunted mothers into the krall. Then each day the mothers are shipped to New York for exhibition.

I must confess they don't seem to mind being exhibited. They take to it like a dead duck to television, to coin a phrase. Almost every single one tries to get her face into the camera and, by George, almost every single one succeeds. Most easily domesticated mothers I ever saw.

"Who's the girl with brush and broom?" shouts James.

"Who's the girl who chases gloom?" says James.

"Mother!" is the riposte to this one. (No, they don't have to push any teak logs around, junior. They just have to yell mother at appropriate intervals.)

"Lotsa fun, lotsa laughs and lotsa loving," James declares heartily. The novitiate is likely to get the impression his ears are playing him tricks from that last word. But, no. Loving is what Mr. James said and loving is what he does. Anyway, it's a reasonably accurate euphemism for what he does. What he does is to kiss the mamas, fondle them, hug them and, in general, muss 'em up. They appear to like it. In fact, there's severe competition for the role of most mussed-up mother.

Tall, Dark Type

JAMES—I throw this in as limply as possible—is tall, dark, husky and handsome, and I expect he appeals not only to the girls on the set but to the ones at home. Thousands of them probably swoon over their ironing boards everyday, causing—I devotedly hope—endless casualties. Mr. James may easily have set fire to more mothers than any man since Nero.

There isn't much else to tell you about this program. Mr. James, from time to time, recites what he calls Mothergrams, a form of verse I shan't inflict on you.

Occasionally, he vaults two or three rows of mothers to land squarely on the lap of a mother in the upper tiers, busses her roundly and vaults back—easily the most specialized form of exercise I ever saw. For all I know he's the only athlete in the world who can do this.

I now propose to adjourn to my favorite saloon where I shall sing "Mother's Day Falls Once a Year But Every Day is Mother's Day to Me" until closing time. Or until they throw me out.

Women Voters Honor Members

Citations for outstanding work during the past year have been awarded by the Prince Georges County League of Women Voters to one of its members and a committee.

Honored at the league's meeting Tuesday night at the University of Maryland were Mrs. Brendan O'Dwyer of Landover Hills, and the four-member radio committee. Committee members were Mrs. Ben Posner, Silver Spring, chairman, and Mrs. Lyman Woodman and Mrs. Mathew Fusillo, Greenbelt, and Mrs. Harry E. Wolf, Berwyn.

Mrs. Harold J. Benjamin and Mrs. Dwight R. Partello, both of College Heights Estates, were elected first vice president and treasurer, and Mrs. Herbert Conrad, Green Meadows, director. Mrs. Reuben Bogdanoff, president, has another year to serve.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Home-Grown Variety Is Just As Bad

About this time each year I write a little warning about visiting motorists who like to combine driving and sightseeing.

Following a fellow like this in traffic is something of a trial. At any given moment he's just as likely to continue moving forward as he is to slow down, speed up, turn, back up or stop dead in the middle of an intersection.

There isn't much you can do about him except summon up all the patience and tolerance at your command, and give him a wide berth.

In a few months, it will be fall again, and the visitors will go home. Then all we'll have to worry about is District motorists who drive the same way.

KILLJOY

W. M. O'C. says he's touched by the pictures of that Chinese dancer who is suing a San Francisco nightclub operator. He says: "Couldn't we all chip in and buy the poor girl some warm clothes?"

WHAT A SHOW

In a few more days I'll get my annual opportunity to say I'm "working" while I'm having the time of my life.

I don't know which match I'll be assigned to in this year's National Celebrities Golf Tournament, but it doesn't matter much. One's as good as the other.

The first year, I drew Babe Didrikson versus Dizzy Dean. They were priceless.

At one point, Dean (who is an excellent golfer) took several strokes getting out of a mean sand trap. When the ball finally blooped out, Diz turned to the gallery, held up his hands for attention, and yelled:

"Now, folks, is they any traps I've missed gettin' into? 'Cause if they is, I wanna go back and try 'em all."

Last year I covered Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Sam Snead and Lew Worsham. And it's debatable which of them was the greatest crowdpleaser.

When Crosby's approach trickled into a creek, Snead solicitously peered down the bank and asked: "Any fish down there, Bing?"

"Don't get your feet wet, Dad," yelled Hope. "Remember your advanced years."

There's something heart-warming about seeing these world-famous headliners knocking themselves out to help The Washington Post raise money for the welfare work that supports the Attorney General's efforts to combat juvenile delinquency.

Hope's appearance on one television show cost the sponsor $40,000. Imagine what he—and the other big names—could command for two days of golf exhibitions plus the big show at the Armory Saturday night!

Yet no participant gets a penny for his work, and many of them actually lose heavily by giving up lucrative engagements, and paying their own traveling expenses.

They come here to give you two wonderful days of fun and relaxation. And if you want my advice, you'll turn to the sports page right now, and get the dope on reserving your tickets while the supply lasts.

Newsreel and television viewers, and radio listeners throughout the country, get only a brief, second-hand taste of what goes on at the Celebrities. District Liners in the Greater Washington area are more fortunate, in that they can attend in person.

Personally, I keep telling myself that I wouldn't let anything short of a broken leg keep me away. And (I hope I don't jinx myself with this) I'm not too sure whether that would do it.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two black kittens and one gray-and-black; housebroken; 6 months old." (Wisconsin 7558.)

"Darling kittens." (Falls Church 9578.)

"Three water lilies, rooted, ready for outdoor lily pond; also several dahlia roots." (Victor 1090.)

"Two black 3-month-old kittens; one gray kitten 10 weeks old; all males." (Trinidad 2453.)

"Affectionate, healthy kittens." (Sligo 2992.)

"Young mother cat and her three delightful offspring." (Jackson 2-6863.)

"Very gentle 8-month-old police puppy." (Overlook 1702.)

CLUB NEWS

The District Line Club meets tonight at 8, Petworth Library, Georgia ave. and Upshur st. nw. This will be "Movie Night," highlighted by the picture story of the 1949 World Series. You're all invited.

MARK TRAIL — By Ed Dodd

I GUESS THAT'LL HOLD MR. MARK TRAIL AND HIS DOG FOR A WHILE!
WAIT! I GOTTA GET THE KEY, SO I CAN GET OUTA THESE BRACELETS I'M WEARING!
FORGET IT, PAL... I CAN PICK 'EM LOOSE IN TWO MINUTES... BEEN DOING IT ALL MY LIFE!
SAY, WHO ARE YOU, PARDNER?

MARY WORTH — By Ken Allen

LISTEN TO ME, TIPPY!.. I'M ONLY TRYING TO PUT MY NOVEL OVER..TO MAKE SOMETHING OF MYSELF.. FOR YOU..!
I'M SATISFIED WITH WHAT YOU ALREADY ARE, GREG! I DON'T GIVE A HOOT ABOUT SEEING YOU FAMOUS!
I'D RATHER MARRY A LITTLE SHOT TODAY THAN A BIG SHOT FIVE YEARS FROM NOW!
B-BUT, DARLING...!
SEE HERE, YOUNG FELLA!..THIS TRAIN IS GOING EAST.... ARE YOU?

ITS SIGNAL FLAGS SAY WHAT?
"YOU ARE STANDING INTO DANGER... I AM DISCHARGING EXPLOSIVES" HMMM...
WE ARE BUT THE SERVANTS OF OUR GLORIOUS NEW GOVERNMENT, SIRE
ALTHOUGH WE WOULD GLADLY DIE IN DISCHARGE OF OUR DUTY TO THE NEW STATE, IT WOULD BE A PITY TO LOSE THIS FINE VESSEL IN AN EXPLOSION
CERTAINLY A LOSS OF FACE WOULD RESULT!
SIRE, THE YANKEE SHIP HAS THIS MINUTE PASSED FROM THE MILEAGE LIMIT OF OUR JURISDICTION!
AH-H-H-H-H- YOU MAY PUT ABOUT NOW, HELMSMAN! HOW UNFORTUNATE THAT SHE OWNS SO MUCH MORE SPEED THAN WE!

GEE! Y-YOUR PICTURE ON THE COVER!
AND READ WHAT IT SAYS RIGHT UNDER IT! "THE AMAZING SHERIFF FINN—A PHENOMENON OF DEMOCRACY," THE ARTICLE STARTS ON PAGE 18!
YOU'VE READ IT ALREADY, EH?
OF COURSE! I WENT BACK AND SAT IN THE CAR! IT'S WONDERFUL! I'M TAKIN' THIS COPY RIGHT OVER TO CLANCY!
GOSH! AND A PICTURE OF HIM SAYING GOODBYE TO THE PROFESSOR AT THE AIRPORT! —AND FOUR FULL PAGES!
YES! AND IT'S CLEVERLY WRITTEN, MICKEY!
BUT WHEN YOU BOIL IT ALL DOWN, IT PRACTICALLY SAYS THAT HE'S A JOKE AS A SHERIFF!
YEAH! AND THAT HE GETS BY ONLY BECAUSE HE'S A NATURAL BORN POLITICIAN!
WELL, I SUPPOSE WE SHOULD BE VERY THANKFUL, BOYS! IT COULD HAVE BEEN A LOT WORSE!

Democrats' Easy-Money Gloom

By Drew Pearson

Top-drawer Democrats were not happy when they got to Chicago and discovered the manner in which a quarter of a million dollars had been raised to welcome President Truman to Chicago.

Pearson

First, a ruling was obtained from the Internal Revenue Bureau that donations to the host committee were a charity gift and tax-deductible. Chicago, it was argued, was playing host to the President regardless of politics.

Having secured this, local Democrats mailed a copy of the Internal Revenue ruling to prospective donors with an appeal for funds. And in the same letter, believe it or not, they inserted the schedule of Democratic political activities.

When George Killion, former treasurer of the National Committee, arrived in Chicago, he showed the nonpolitical appeal for tax-deductible funds, with the Democratic events schedule, to Chairman Bill Boyle.

"That fool Nate Lichtblau," growled Killion.

"It's the first I knew about it," remarked the worried Boyle.

Later, he reported the whole matter to President Truman.

Note—The Chicago Daily News and former Congressman Everett Dirksen, GOP candidate for the Senate, made the most of Democratic red faces and of the huge amounts of money contributed by the liquor interests to the Truman reception.

Rough-And-Tumble Veep

You can't beat Alben Barkley when it comes to rough-and-tumble debate or after-dinner speeches.

The other day in Chicago, Barkley pulled a near-miracle. The occasion was the big Democratic rally honoring Thomas Jefferson just before President Truman arrived from the West. The dinner was poorly handled. The toastmaster forgot to introduce Postmaster General Donaldson and Secretary of the Navy Matthews. Jack Arvey staged a show of dancing girls from Chez Paris, while in contrast, motherly Representative Mary Norton of New Jersey droned out a 30-minute speech.

By this time it was nearly midnight, the honor-guest table was almost empty, and the audience was ready to go home. But Barkley was still to be heard from.

Most speakers would have been too discouraged to start. But the Vice President got to the point of what other speakers had ignored—the real story of Thomas Jefferson. He described the details of his life, his influence on the Nation, and did it in such a way that the tired and milling audience actually listened.

Absent Congressman

This column, leaning backward to Representative Thurmond Chatham of North Carolina, recently explained his prolonged absence record from Congress by the fact that his wife had passed away 10 months ago and he had not been able to concentrate on his work.

That explanation may have been overly generous. Since then, it has been learned that Representative Chatham's absence has been partly due to house parties at his Currituck Sound cottage.

It should be noted that his prolonged absences from Congress apparently are not entirely due to the loss of his wife.

Merry-Go-Round

Secretary of State Acheson is so tired after his London conferences that he cabled the State Department that he is not to be disturbed on the voyage home—no matter how many speeches Senator McCarthy makes about him . . . Francis Pickens Miller, the Byrd machine's sworn foe in Virginia, tossed a real hot potato at Senator Harry Byrd. He proposed a Virginia State "Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Expenses." Senator Byrd uses his chairmanship of a similar committee in Congress to fire shots at the Administration, but no such probe of padded payrolls in Byrd-controlled Virginia has ever been dared before . . . Another hot fight between right and left wings of the GOP is on in North Dakota. Frank Vogel, a campaign manager for "Old Bob" La Follette's presidential campaign in 1924, is running for Governor . . . Prof. Harold Urey, famed atomic scientist from the University of Chicago, is slated to be director of the new science foundation . . . Landlords have been getting such bad publicity over high rents that the Norfolk (Va.) Real Estate Board appointed a 22-man committee to keep rents down. Instead of curbing rents, however, nine of the committee members, themselves, boosted rents from 27 to 100 percent. The nine men who were supposed to hold rents down but increased their own rents are Ludwell Baldwin, Walter Bott, Clifton Councill, Ralph Drewery, M. Etheridge, Robert Koolage, William Kutz, Lawrence Page and C. V. W. Trice.

"Driver of the Year"

Lloyd Reisner, 37-year-old truck driver of Indianapolis, was as cool and collected as you would expect the "Driver of the Year" to be when he was congratulated by President Truman for his highway safety feats.

Truman himself seemed to get a bigger thrill than the truck driver as Reisner told of saving a little girl's life on a highway near Louisville, Ky.

"Our highways are becoming safer every year," remarked Truman, "and we have men like you to thank for it."

Before departing, Reisner got a prized presidential autograph for a 9-year-old Indianapolis neighbor, John Truman Harmon—no relation to the President.

"You're making a lifelong Democrat out of this boy," grinned Reisner as Truman inscribed a personal card for the youngster.

"With a second name like that, he ought to be," quipped the President.

There's a revolution going on in summer suits! Men are switching to wonderful new spun rayon. The test tube miracle that astonished the experts . . . looks and feels like wool, yet keeps you crisp, cool and comfortable on the hottest days!

Polar Frost

100% SPUN RAYON

Tropicals

The experts were wrong! They said tropical fabrics couldn't be made to equal the patterns of heavy woolens. But new spun rayon has stumped them all. Modern textile science has created a miracle fabric that's light, wrinkle resistant, tailors like a dream. And the fine weave of spun rayon has a quality all its own. Its range of unique patterns and colors cannot be matched by any other fabric . . . at anywhere near the price! Frost-tinted plain shades, clear hairlines and deep alternating stripes, checks, glen plaids—a whole array of remarkable suits that pep up your wardrobe, make you feel like a million. See for yourself what the new way of summer living means. See Polar Frost Tropicals at The Hecht Co!
